Mexico's Danger.
Men, Women, Their Romances.
For the Discouraged.
No Baby Kissing.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—
(Copyright, 1928)

MEXICO faces the danger of religious civil war. Civil war is the worst kind of war, and religious war is the worst kind of civil war.

LATE news from Mexico predicts that Calles, in spite of a constitution forbidding two successive presidential terms, will remain in power.

In control of the army, he can do anything, and constitutions are only made of paper—easily changed. He probably believes that Mexico's welfare demands that he continue, and he may be right.

NEW YORK'S Bureau of Social Hygiene, including John D. Rockefeller, Jr., among its directors, supplies information on the romances of 100 men and 100 women, all married but not to each other.

The 100 men had had 681 love affairs, the 100 women had had 677. Most of them happened before marriage.

TWENTY-NINE husbands and 41 wives continued their "romances" after they were married. Men's love affairs begin to die out, usually, at about 30.

Women start all over again after 40.

THE New York statistics confirm Metchnikoff's statement that older women are often unhappy because they become really interested in romance when husbands of their own age get tired of it.

Plato and other Greeks had a plan to arrange that, but even our free and easy age would not tolerate it.

HELEN KELLER was born blind and deaf. In infancy she could not hear, see or speak. She speaks, reads by her finger tips, "hears" what others say by putting her fingers on their lips.

Morris R. Dougherty, with no legs and only one arm, runs his airplane unaided, and plans a flight to Europe.

There are lessons for those discouraged by what they call "lack of opportunity."

MR. HOOVER, kindly but firmly, says "I shall kiss no baby for publication." That is wise, and kind to the babies.

No intelligent mother allows ANYBODY to kiss her baby. All adults carry in their mouths disease germs, harmless to the carriers but dangerous to an infant in whom the protecting white corpuscles are undeveloped.

Mr. Hoover did, however, hold the baby while its older brother took a photograph. He likes babies.

SECRETARY KELLOGG says every nation can sign the world peace pact, therefore Russia can sign. This country does not recognize the Bolshevik government in existence, but a way will be found to let the Russians in, perhaps.

That will please Europe, Germany especially. Living next to the Big Bear, and knowing how revolution stimulates a nation's power, for a while, at least, the Germans want a satisfied Russia.

SCIENTISTS are aroused by the new cancer "discovery," advancing the suppositon that there is a substance or "fermentation" within the body that promotes tumor growth.

It is hoped that some other substance, or "ferment," may be found to PREVENT such growth.

Some doctors suggest an all vegetable diet to prevent cancer. In a certain monastery where no meat is ever eaten, none of the monks has cancer. On the other hand, among savages on a meat diet, no savage has cancer.

It would be interesting to hear from tribes within the Arctic and Antarctic Circles that eat meat and fat only.

Sir Thomas Horder, eminent authority, says a mixed diet of vegetables, fruit and meat is best for cancer patients.

IN 1927, every American farmer on the average made $157 more than he made in 1926. That's something enough for the first payment on a new car.

But the average farmer in 1927 earned only $1,290 in all, less than the salary of an underpaid chauffeur in the city.

The farmer takes care on the average of 275 acres, and he has to invest $15,445 to own the farm. No wonder farmers' sons go to the city.

RACE TIME ACROSS U. S. IN PLANE

VICTOR, B. C., July 21.—(AP.)—John Henry Mears and D. B. Collyer hopped off from the Victoria airport for Seattle at 3:37 a. m. today, entering the home stretch of their dash around the world from New York to New York.

After a brief stop at Seattle, the air tourists planned to hop off on a non-stop flight to New York, where they hoped to terminate the dash at noon Sunday.

By doing this the men would have circumnavigated the globe in less than 24 days, thus shearing about four days from the present record.

Mears and Collyer arrived here last night from Japan on the liner Empress of Russia. Their plane, which carried them from London to Tokio, was whisked from the ship and hurried to the Victoria airport, where it was assembled for the early morning flight.

NO SEATTLE STOP

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Representatives of John Henry Mears and D. B. Collyer, who left Victoria, B. C., on the last lap of a race against time around the world this morning, received a telegram from the fliers saying that the first stop would be at Spokane, Wash., where it was expected to land at 7 a. m., Western time.

The telegram was sent last night after the fliers disembarked from the steamer on which they had crossed the Pacific. When Mears and Collyer took off from Victoria it was understood that they planned a stop at Seattle but they failed to land there.

Shenango Dam to Convert Swamp To Big Lake

DID you know that Pymatuning Swamp, the great impenetrable morass in Crawford county, about 100 miles from Pittsburgh, is to be turned into a lake larger than Chautauqua by damming the Shenango River, and that a large part of the 25 square miles of land that is to be submerged has already been acquired for the purpose?

This mighty project and the benefits that are expected to flow from it will be set forth in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph in a page of articles and illustrations devoted to Greenville, which will be one of the principal beneficiaries.

MAGNATES MEET TO DECIDE STATUS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Wearing another trick suit and a quainter hat, K. M. Landis, High Commissioner of Baseball, arrived in Pittsburgh shortly after 9 o'clock this morning to sit in solemn conclave on the case of Pitcher John Miljus, with the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cleveland Indians the contending parties.

E. S. Barnard, president of the American League, also was on hand, along with Billy Evans, vice president of the Cleveland club, and a Miss Jamison, secretary of the Cleveland club, who is alleged to have made a clerical error that resulted in Cleveland putting in a claim for Miljus which it later repudiated.

Barney Dreyfuss, president, and Sam Dreyfuss, treasurer of the Pirates, represented the local club. The confab was due to get under way at about noon and decision may be reserved for a few days.

The complication over Miljus arose last week, when the Pirates asked for waivers on the pitcher and Cleveland made a claim. When Miljus was delivered it was discovered that instead of the usual big league waiver price of $7,500, Cleveland had to pay $17,500 under the rules, the player immediately was turned back and the Pirates then demanded a showdown. Miljus has been here for a week, waiting for a decision in the case. Meanwhile his pay goes on.

They're down below the .500 mark again, those Pirates, after playing in-and-out ball in two games with the Dodgers. The same clubs will clash in a twin bill this afternoon at Forbes Field, the first game to begin at 1:45.

In dire straits for pitchers, Manager Bush will call upon Lee Meadows to make his first start of the season in the second contest of the bargain attraction. Lee has been troubled with a sore arm throughout the season, but of late he has been able to get something on the ball. Carmen Hill, the other major league hurler who wears "specs," also will be in action, being slated for the first battle.

Uncle Robbie, the Dodger pilot, is expected to send a pair of right-handers to the slab, inasmuch as he used three southpaws in the winning of yesterday's frolic. Rube Ehrhardt and Ray Moss are available for mound duty. Bill Doak also is set to work.

With right-handers pitching for Brooklyn, George Grantham will return to the clean up position in the Pirate batting order.

As Crowds Rally to Hoover

DRIVERS FILE CHARGES IN AUTO FINE WAR

The Pittsburgh Motor Club's campaign against alleged illegal practices of officers and justices of the peace of Allegheny county against motorists is beginning to bear fruit, Charles H. Roth, secretary of the club, announced today.

"Motorists illegally arrested, illegally fined, and in some instances illegally jailed, are beginning to report and file affidavits and information," said Secretary Roth. "We have a splendid case to present next week against an officer for perjury. A few cases of this sort will show a lot of these officers and squires they must conduct their work legally, and make their ruling with due regard to justice.

SCHOOL FOR SQUIRES

"There ought to be a school to instruct a lot of squires how to conduct their business," Roth added. "They certainly run their affairs in a slipshod and casual manner, and the motorists have been preyed upon. The law clearly states that an officer must be in uniform when arresting a motorist, yet we have many instances in which no uniform was in evidence or badge shown."

Motorists who have been victimized by over-zealous squires, Roth said, and who have paid fines in fear of the law, are now presenting their cases to the Pittsburgh Motor Club's attorney, F. J. Zapalla. Informations against arresting officers who have committed perjury and against squires who have illegally fined, will follow, Mr. Roth announced, as soon as the facts are checked up.

In order that motorists may not confuse local parking and other restrictions governed by city ordinances, with summary offenses coming within the jurisdiction of squires, Magistrate Staley, of the City Traffic Court, defined Section 1039 of the Pennsylvania motor vehicle code for the Pittsburgh Motor Club. The club has no conflict with such local regulations, Secretary Roth explained, but is after "fining squires," who deal in summary convictions for alleged violations of the commonwealth's motor vehicle code. The penalties for violating the local restrictions, Magistrate Staley said, are determined by the ordinance itself and not by a state law.

Six Blasts Wreck Plant

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—(AP.)—Six explosions in rapid succession destroyed an illicit distilling plant, its new equipment and alcohol valued at $75,000 at 2 o'clock this morning. Five men were severely burned.

The blasts followed a raid by the prohibition forces on an old cooperage shop. Negro workmen dismantling the plant, under the direction of Federal agents, were moving alcohol cans, and one of these is believed to have come in contact with a live wire.

The detonations threw the neighborhood into a turmoil. Scores of persons rushed into the streets. Fed by the alcohol and thousands of old barrels stored in the place, flames roared to a height from which they were visible for miles.

Death Due to Heat

The heat wave caused a death and a prostration in the Pittsburgh district yesterday. A boy was drowned in the Monongahela River, near Clairton, while seeking relief from the heat, and a woman, overcome, collapsed at Washington and Epiphany streets.

The finding of a pair of shoes and overalls on the river bank led Clairton police to drag the stream and recover the body of Edgar Ramis, 7, of 901 Van Kirk street, Clairton, last night. A man found the clothing and notified the police.

FALLS IN STREET

Mrs. Mary Washington, 47, of 1618 Colwell street, was prostrated while walking in Washington, near Epiphany steet, late yesterday. She was attended at the Mercy Hospital and later went to her home.

No relief from the heat wave is expected today by W. S. Brotzman weather forecaster. He said the weather today will be much like that of yesterday, with a temperature of about 85 to 86 degrees.

HEAVY RAIN CAUSES BUTLER CROP DAMAGE

BUTLER, Pa., July 21.—One of the heaviest rains in years last night inflicted heavy damage on farm crops, according to reports reaching the weather observatory.

OWNERS WON'T DEAL

Pittsburgh coal operators will make no agreement of any sort with the United Mine Workers. Not even the Bertha Consumers Company, whose president, John H. Jones, has been the only operator willing to meet the union leaders in conference, will make a wage contract with the strikers.

Supplementing his statement that he would be willing to discuss the situation with the strikers' spokesmen, Jones explained today that this must not be taken to mean that his company was ready to make a wage agreemtnt with the union.

BERTHA'S POSITION

"It is for the receivers of the Bertha Consumers' Company, and not for me," said Jones, "to indicate its policy. But I think I reflect their views in saying that we will not resume relations with the union unless the majority of the operators of the Pittsburgh district do so, and there is no prospect of that occurring now. Our mines are running satisfactorily; there is no labor shortage. Hence there is no reason why we should change our present arrangements."

TERMINAL MEN SILENT

The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation officials today remained silent as to whether they would negotiate a new agreement with the union. In some quarters this silence was attributed to the report that Horace F. Baker was to retire as president August 1, to be succeeded by G. F. Downey. No announcement, it was rumored, would be made before that time. Baker and Downey were absent from the city today.

PGH COAL CO. FIRM

The Pittsburgh Coal Company is firm in its decision that there's nothing to negotiate, no need to have a United Mine Workers' agreement.

Meanwhile union officials are busy drafting their views of scales and working conditions to meet the pronouncement of their Indianapolis conference.

Hunt Car in Kidnaping Of Girl

International News Service.

BELLE VERNON, Pa., July 21.—Kidnapers who are believed to have lured away Lucinda Boyce, 15-year-old Belle Vernon high school girl, were sought today by police throughout the Monongahela Valley.

Confirmation for a theory of kidnaping was found when police learned that men in a sport automobile trailed the girl down the main street of Belle Vernon last Tuesday, the day she disappeared.

According to the girl's widowed mother, Mrs. Mary Boyce, Lucinda went to the neighborhood store Tuesday evening and failed to return.

Chief of Police Jack Thomas, of the Charleroi police department, to whom the girl's disappearance was reported, said late yesterday that he felt reasonably certain that the girl had been kidnaped.

TWO TEAMS TIED IN DANCE

Five teams were averaging a little better than four miles an hour in the speed dance contest at Motor Square Garden at 10 o'clock morning at the end of the sixty fourth hour. They rest in the morning and pep up in the afternoon and evening, because the morning attendance is small.

Two teams, Nos. 17 and 7 were tied with 280 miles, No. 17 having made a spurt during the night to pull up on even terms with No. 7, comprised of Cora Dean, Joe Fisher, Peggy Dunkle and Butch Fisher, all of Homestead. No. 17 is made up of Love Cotter, of Allentown; Wilfred McClafferty, Sharpsburg; Louis O'Malley and George Rihn, of Lawrenceville.

With 13 hours still to go, Team No. 9 held a mark of 276 miles, sufficient to keep it in striking distance of the leaders, and enough to spare should No. 1, with 272 miles, or No. 13, with 266 miles, threaten to oust them.

Beginning this afternoon a sprint will be staged every four hours, with a $50 prize to the winner.

The contest is scheduled to wind up at 11:15 o'clock tonight at the completion of the seventy seventh hour, when the prize money, $1,000 for the winner, $250 for second, $125 for third and $100 for fourth will be distributed. Milton Crandall, promoter, says they expect a packed house at the windup.

LIKE MACHINE VOTING

After four weeks of voting machine ballotting, Pittsburghers are as enthusiastic now as they were when The Sun-Telegraph first gave the general public an opportunity to cast a vote on the modern plan.

Although countless questions are asked of the attendants regarding the operation, safety, speed and secrecy of the voting machines, there have been practically no objections to them, most people admitting that the machine method is the best way to vote, the one most dependable.

Some of the tens of thousands of voters on the machines during the past four weeks must have done deep thinking, for many persons who voted on one day returned the next to ask the attendant serious questions regarding the possibility of erroneous count, false registering and other miscarriages of justice.

The voting machine is built so that it cannot discount votes and all hand counting is eliminated. The city clerk of Schenectady, New York, remarking on the use of the voting machines, said:

"Question was never raised in Schenectady as to the reliability of the machine count; we have never had a recount."

In office building, in political atmosphere, in amusement park and in hotel, the voting machines in Pittsburgh are proving a continued source of interest and satisfaction.

The straw vote results yesterday showed Hoover with 251 and Smith with 301, bringing the grand total to date, on both machine and coupon vote and personal canvass, 14,228 for Hoover and 20,693 for Smith.

BOYS HURT, MOB SLUGS DRIVER

Attempting to escape, police say, after his automobile had struck two boys at Clark and Roberts streets late last night, William Little, 40, a Negro, of 28 Boone way, was manhandled by a crowd of men, who dragged him to the Center Avenue Police Station.

The injured boys are Irwin Taylor, 6, of 1800 Center avenue, and James Lindsay, 6, of 71 Roberts street, Negroes. They are in serious condition in the Passavant Hospital.

More than a half dozen calls were received by the police from residents who feared that Little might be seriously injured by the men. Another Negro who was with Little escaped.

POISONING OF 200 PROBED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—A special board of physicians and bacteriologists was convened here today to make a thorough investigation of the poisoning of more than 200 women and children, who were stricken yesterday on a picnic sponsored by the Central Union Mission, a charitable organization.

Preliminary examinations failed to reveal a definite cause for the poisoning, believed to have resulted from food packed in lunch boxes by church women.

Most of the victims recovered after emergency hospital treatment, but 14 were still left in the City Hospital today. Some were said to be in serious condition.

The poisoning came as the aftermath of an otherwise delightful picnic for the women and children, who were given a chance to escape a street temperature of 100 degrees. All were taken down the Potomac to Marshall Hall picnic grounds on a steamboat.

A few persons were stricken just as the boat was preparing to leave on the return trip in the evening, but most of them did not feel the effects until they were on board.

Most of the victims ate box lunches prepared by Protestant women working under the direction of Mrs. John S. Bennett, wife of the director of the mission. Each lunch box contained a ham sandwich, peanut butter sandwich, a hard-boiled egg, a piece of cake, a peach, a banana and a novelty ice cream. Food also was sold from stands at the picnic grounds.

WEST IS CHOSEN TO SUCCEED WORK

International News Service.

SUPERIOR, Wis., July 21.—The appointment of Roy O. West as secretary of interior occasioned considerable surprise here today. It had been expected confidently that the post Dr. Hubert Work is vacating would go to a western man, as it is in the regions well west of the Mississippi that reclamation and irrigation—the two outstanding problems of the Interior Department—are most dominant.

West is an Illinois lawyer and has had no experience in private life that would especially fit him to take charge of the public domain. Most of his life has been devoted to politics.

HODGES WAS FAVORED

While it is argued that Work was a doctor, he comes from Denver and is thoroughly conversant with the demands of the West. It had been thought here that William V. Hodges, also of Denver, and a close personal friend of Work's, would get the call to succeed him.

West's inexperience and geographical address are not expected to block his confirmation by the Senate, however. Friends of the President point out that the job is only for slightly over six months' duration, and it is not anticipated that any considerable number of Senators would feel minded to withhold approval to a personal appointment for such a short length of time.

Mr. Coolidge selected the Illinois National Committeemen because of a warm, personal friendship, manifested by the recent visit of West to Cedar Island Lodge by express invitation, and he wants a confirmation immediately the Senate convenes.

The Chicago man accepted the appointment, it is understood, with the express agreement that his tenure in office would cease on March 4, next, along with President Coolidge, and that he need expect no similar reward from Herbert Hoover, should the latter be elected. The glory of serving half a year as a member of the cabinet will suffice West, it is said.

RACING TIME ACROSS U. S.

o'clock this (Friday) evening. With God and a fair portion of luck behind our gallant little plane, City of New York, we should reach Manhattan's Battery shortly after noon Sunday.

We started from the Battery at exactly 45 seconds after 5 o'clock, the morning of June 29, according to the official timing of Benjamin F. Castle, treasurer of the National Aeronautic Club. If we reach there by noon Sunday, we will have made the trip around the world in 23 days and 7 hours.

Everything is in readiness for us to debark from the Canadian Pacific liner as soon as her nose touches her pier at Victoria. Our plane is already on deck. My pilot, Collyer, has tested her engines. She is ready to resume the flight in which she so sturdily carried us from the White Star Liner Olympic's pier at Cherbourg, across Europe, Siberia and China to Yokohama. The Empress of Russia has broken her own record for time across the Pacific to Victoria.

We will hop off from Victoria by plane tomorrow at daybreak. Tentatively, our schedule is to land in Seattle at 4 a. m., in Spokane at 7, and then make a non-stop flight to Omaha, arriving there at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

We will take off from Omaha at daybreak Sunday morning and expect to make our next landing at Miller Field, on Staten Island. From there we will rush by automobile and special tug back to the Battery, from where we started. Thus our trip will be complete.

Watch for us to circle over New York. It should be around noon. Then watch for us to land at Miller Field, which the War Department has so kindly placed at our disposal, and then for our rush to the Battery. There's no doubt in our minds but that we will make it with flying colors. Again, I say: Whoopee!

3 NABBED BY MOTOR PATROL

An early morning chase from the Penn avenue district to Aspinwall resulted in the arrest, police say, of three alleged holdup men who an hour earlier had beaten and robbed a pedestrian. The arrests were made by the newly organized police emergency motor patrol.

John Politeno, 50, of 97 Hallam avenue, Stowe township, was robbed of $135 and left lying at Seventeenth street and Mulberry way. The three thugs escaped in a taxicab. After being treated at the West Penn Hospital, Politeno gave the police a description of the men.

One hour later Emergency Motorcycle Patrolman Joseph Lynch and Daniel Owens detected three men in a taxicab near Twenty-first street. When they approached the taxi sped away and the cab and motorcycle raced to Aspinwall before the police were able to overtake the machine. The prisoners were taken to the Penn avenue Police Station where they said they were Joseph Burke, 27, of 2117 Liberty avenue and Mike Dimirack, 21, and his brother Peter, 22, both of 2209 Spring way. They admitted the robbery, police say. At a hearing before Magistrate John Orie they were held for court on charges of larceny.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—(AP.)—Six robbers wearing white masks and armed with pistols and sawed off shotguns, were foiled in an attempt to rob the American Cigar Company of a $12,000 payroll yesterday when employes telephoned police while a locked door delayed the gunmen's entrance.

Screams of women and movements of others to telephone dismayed the robbers as their entrance to the counting room was blocked. They rushed from the building and sped away in their automobile.

CIVIL TRIAL GRANTED YOUTH

International News Service.

MEXICO CITY, July 21.—With all Mexico still speculating today as to who would be the country's next President, Jose de Leon Toral, the youth who slew President-elect Alvaro Obregon, enjoyed a 72-hour respite. The respite was granted him in a court order known as the amparo, which restrains both police and military officials from summarily executing him.

The youth will be given a regular civil trial, which will be public, an official announcement stated. Several arrests have been made during the last 24 hours, but the police refused to reveal the names of those arrested. However, it is believed none of them were politically important.

The late leader probably will be buried tomorrow at Huatabampo. Mexico's traditional tribute to her honored dead, a crown of porcelain, will mark his grave.

Bowed down by grief, Senora Obregon, the late president-elect's widow, and their seven young children, are awaiting the arrival of the funeral train.

SHOT MATE, RIVAL, SHE SAYS

International News Service.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., July 20—Walking into police headquarters here today, Mrs. Virginia Alvarez Hussey, 32, beautiful Spanish woman told officers:

"I have just shot and killed my husband, Lindley Hussey, and the other woman. You will find their bodies along the road, near our former home in Parkerford, Chester county."

With that she pulled a .32 caliber pistol from her handbag. The pistol apparently had been fired a short time before. Officers immediately set out toward Parkerford, a small town on the Schuylkill River, six miles southeast of Pottstown.

Information gained from former neighbors of the woman was to the effect that her husband was an author and that he became infatuated with another woman several weeks ago.

The Husseys lived in Parkerford, it was said, and his wife, after the estrangement went to New York.

Searching parties from Parkerford and Linfield, a smaller town across the river, were looking for the bodies this morning, after news of Mrs. Hussey's surrender had spread.

FUNNY?

It is funny, think some people. Out here, they have not been dragging around but at times maintaining a speed of about six miles an hour. Here are Flo Carlough and Jimmie Priore, team 9, and Love Cotter and Wilfred McClafferty, team 17, tied for first with team 7. Today they are doing "4 M. R. H."

A CHAMPION RESTS

LONG AGO

Long, long ago, Albert Bonach was known as a marathon dance champion. Now, he is known only as Albert Bonach. He is just an entrant in the race, along with Deretta Williamson. They are holding first place with another couple as team 17. This is a rest period.

HOOVER RESUMES CAMPAIGN

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., July 21.—(AP.)—Abandoning his original plans for a quiet week-end at his home here, Herbert Hoover today began a series of political conferences which will be continued intermittently until the time of his notification on August 11.

Gov. C. C. Young of California was the first of those from whom the Republican presidential nominee sought information as to the political situation on the Pacific coast.

The Governor was invited to luncheon and for a discussion afterwards in Mr. Hoover's study, located in one corner of the rambling Spanish-type stucco house which nestles on a hillside in a setting of evergreens and bright house flowers of many species.

TO MEET LEADERS

During the early days of next week Mr. Hoover will confer with Senator Hiram Johnson and leaders from other Pacific coast states.

Mr. Hoover will spend Sunday quietly at home, but will attend church services, probably in the beautiful chapel at Stanford University, which stands in the center of a group of school buildings.

Between times, the nominee will work on his acceptance address, almost all of which already is in the first draft stage.

Mr. Hoover usually writes and rewrites his papers and speeches several times, and his advisers says there will be no exception in this case.

After the speech is ready for the printer, the Republican standard bearer will lay aside the cares of the campaign and will take to the hills, at some point in his home state, for several days of rest and fishing.

While he has benefited by the trip across the continent, which ended yesterday morning, the Commerce Secretary has had many months of hard work with scarcely a break, and he feels both the desire and need for a brief vacation before the strenuous days that are ahead of him after the notification ceremonies.

Policeman Held Dive Partner

Acting under orders of Judge Elder W. Marshall, Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren today swore out information against James Swide, a city patrolman, and George Roma as the proprietors of a liquor joint at 1230 Wylie avenue. The information charged violation of the Snyder act.

It was alleged that the two men were owners of the place when they were arraigned on murder charges in the death of a Negro, Edward Travis, shot in Wylie avenue three weeks ago. Witnesses made affidavit, after the coroner's jury had exonerated the men, that Travis was shot without justification.

Louise Fazenda Is to Begin Her Free-Lancing Career With "Riley the Cop" As Her Vehicle

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 21.

IT DIDN'T take long for Louise Fazenda to get her first free-lance film. No sooner did it leak out that her five years' sociation with Warner Brothers had terminated than Louise's hone rang all day long with picture offers. For Louise is ad- ittedly the finest comedy character woman on the screen. I say "comedy character woman" because she has most frequently appeared in funny films. But like all true mirth-makers from Chaplin down, Louise possesses the deep dramatic sense inherent in all reallly great actresses.

Louise has been a long time in pictures—since way back in the Sennett days—and she'll still be holding center stage when crops of doll-faces yet to come are in the sear and yellow.

But the get back to the news of the first free-lance Fazenda picture: It will be "Riley the Cop," a Fox picture, with the one who leads the life of "Riley" no less a thespian than J. Farrell MacDonald. And this team may be taken as a rich gurantee that the customers will roll down the aisles with laughter.

Content that "The Scarlet Virgin" is as good—even better—than "Variety," Lya De Putti left today for a New York vacation happier than she has been since the inception of her American film career. The star feels that the Columbia picture gives her opportunity to portray the type role for which she is best fitted. And given opportunity Lya will do the rest. It is understood that the film will be given a big Broadway showing in the early fall.

Fred Niblo, the director, and Enid Bennett, one of yesteryear's most popular stars, are busy receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a brand new baby girl just come to keep company with Lois, aged seven, and Peter, aged four. The distinguished couple believes that there's luck in odd numbers.

Of all the famous and interestinng organizations in Hollywood, perhaps the most fascinating is the "Girls' Club," of which Mary Pickford is president. Its membership includes some of the greatest names in screenland, and the possessors of many of them were mere struggling beginners when the club was first organized. Early next week the club will entertain a couple of hundred guests at "Pickfair." All members will be present, including Laura La Plante, Julanne Johnston, Virginia Valli, Ruth Roland, Gertrude Olmstead, Claire Windsor, Anita Stewart, Billie Dove, May McAvoy, Lois Wilson, Zazu Pitts, Mildred Lloyd, Carmel Myers, Helen Ferguson, Pauline Garon, eatrice Jop and Colleen Moore.

Mentioning Colleen reminds me at perhaps the most interested ectator at the world's premier of ilac Time" was Mrs. Mary Kelly. rs. Kelly, be it known, is Colleen's andmother—and she didn't have change her name to make it Irish. Mrs. Kelly accompanied Colleen to the Hollywood gold coast 10 years ago, and since then has shared all the joys and sorrows that go with a film career. N- wonder she was an enthusias- eer-leader at Colleen's tri- despite her 87 years.

name of Mary Philbin's picture, "Salvage," has been changed to "Forbidden Love." Isn't that just sweet? And Mary, by the way, is reported to be once again heart-whole and fancy-free, having agreed to disagree with the clever swain once rumored as her future husband. The young man used to be very much in earnest, and he's not in the habit of accepting defeat. So Hollywood is sort of watchfully waiting to see what'll happen.

You will remember Bessie Barriscale, and if you know either your film or theater history, you'll remember her husband, Howard Hickman. He was once among the best-known picture directors, and put in eight years treading the boards of the stage. Now he has been cast as Leila Hyams father in the Metro production of "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

Louise Brooks arrived in Hollywood just in time to shake a day-day to Mayor Jimmy Walker who departed among the mournful adieux of the entire film colony. It is said that Jimmy left sooner than expected, after getting one glimpse of a screen test which he had taken while visiting the First National lot. The mayor's credo is "be yourself." But after seeing himself "act up" he has decided that this motto doesn't go for the movies.

After five years looking over the ground, Le Marquise De La Falaise De La Courdraye, otherwise known as "Hank," and the husband of Gloria Swanson, has determined to use the name of Henry Falaise, and seek a screen career on his own. Hank's first film will be titled "Yours to Command." It is produced by an independent outfit, and the release has not yet been determined.

KENNYWOOD OFFERS MOTOR ACT, CLOWNS

PAVING SURVEY FIRM ASKS CITY FOR $1,133.65

Council yesterday received an ordinance appropriating $1,133.65 as payment for services rendered by the Chicago Paving Laboratory, Inc., which surveyed the asphalt pavement situation here. The sum included the pay and expenses of H. W. Skidmore, Chicago paving expert. The original ordinance was vetoed by Mayor Charles H. Kline on the grounds that Council, by resolution, had gone on record as favoring the hiring of Pittsburghers only. It was passed over his veto.

ROMANCE, FUN IN BILLS

In "Nothing But the Truth," which the Nixon players will present in the Nixon Theater next week, one of the members of a stock broker's office has bet his partners $10,000 that he can go 24 hours without telling an untruth.

William Harris, Jr., produced "In Love With Love" in New York, where the comedy was well received. "In Love With Love" will be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week.

"The Captive," in the Gayety, closes its engagement tonight.

Next week's screen attraction in the Penn, "Diamond Handcuffs," contains three separate stories or plays, and three separate casts of players all blended into one dramatic tale of a huge diamond. The leading players are Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel and Lawrence Gray. "Chinese Nights" will be on the stage.

Sidney and Martha Franklin, brother and sister, enact roles of husband and wife in "The Wheel of Chance," Richard Barthelmess' latest starring vehicle coming to the Stanley next week. Lina Basquette, Margaret Livingston, Bodil Rosing and Warner Oland are in the cast.

Gary Cooper supports Esther Ralston in her latest dramatic picture, "Half a Bride," to be shown in the Grand next week. The story shows Miss Ralston and Cooper on a desert island.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Mother Finds a Job!

By Evangeline Weir

THE little flapper found life a queer problem which no one was willing or able to solve for her. It seemed a kind of dizzy world where every one was drunk with some hobby that did not amount to much. She followed in the path made ready by the girls of the age, but she found no pleasure in the latest follies and vices. To refuse to take part in their amusements would mean to be set aside—lonely for society of her own age.

She applied to a boy of her set; one who had too much money and time to waste.

"Dick, do you like the girls—the kind we are?"

"No," he answered frankly. "I do not see how you are to be different, either. You can't go backward; you just have to move on with the crowd wherever it leads."

"I wish I was so poor that I was obliged to work."

He shook his head.

"The working class are no better, Kitty. They follow us as close as their money permits."

"I don't like cigarettes," she confessed.

"You have a good excuse to quit," he told her.

"Slang is coarse—petting vulgar," she continued.

"We are a bad lot!" he admitted. "Think of the children we shall bring into the world."

The little flapper shook her head and looked grave.

"I should not care to be a mother to a daughter like myself. I am sorry for my own mother, but I think it is partly her fault; she has been so busy that she neglected me when I needed her most. When I was small I was left in charge of a nurse or governess; when I was grown I was turned loose in this pleasure-mad crowd without experience or caution. We don't know each other very well; I couldn't talk to her about many of the things which go on in our set."

The boy, two years her senior, felt old and wise. He considered her words thoughtfully before he answered.

"You are a girl; it's your mother's business to know."

"Suppose she knew of that wild lark when we were out carousing around all night?"

He felt ashamed and told her so.

"It was my fault; I should have taken you home at decent hour."

"It sickened and frightened me when I thought about it next day. My maid criticized and cautioned me. Really, she seems more concerned about me than mother does."

"Let us change things from now on," the young man said, rising and holding out his hand to the girl.

When they were gone a woman arose from a nook in the cliff near them.

"It is your mother's business to know!" The words kept ringing like a knell in her ears. It awakened an unpleasant truth in her mind. She had failed to protect the one thing in the whole world for whose existence she was responsible. In all her restless, pleasure-seeking life, she had never been so deeply stirred as by the few words spoken by a boy who was a part of that new growth which no one understood nor cared to understand.

"The maid so concerned that she took a mother's place—my place, and explained things which should have come from my lips. I am a miserable failure!"

In the days which followed the confession she had overheard, Mrs. Van Sant watched her daughter closely. She was wise in her silence, however, and her child never dreamed that her mother had entered into her world with the instinct of a ferret.

The girl found it very pleasant to have mother ask her advice about trifles; to be taken into her confidence about things she could easily understand. Even father seemed to recognize at last that he had a flesh and blood daughter instead of a doll to pet and dress. She enjoyed the companionship of both, for she was a loving little flapper in spite of long neglect. It was not such a mad world after all, she acknowledged to herself. She found her problems less difficult as she talked them over with father or her sympathetic mother who had been a girl herself and knew so many things she did not know. One thing the little flapper never guessed; how her mother spent herself for the reckless set speeding toward a dangerous curve. Mrs. Van Sant's friends called her home "The Flappers' Nest." She smiled wisely and answered, "It's a good nest—for the benefit of the public."

"You will soon grow tired of your new fad," some one told her.

"I'll try to keep up my interest until my daughter is married at least."

"You spend yourself and your money—"

"I'm a willing spendthrift," she added.

"We'll erect a monument to your memory some day," a friend teased her.

"Less important ones have burdened the public," she answered lightly.

There was something in her tone which touched the heart.

"I really believe you're taking this seriously," the other chided her.

"I never was so serious in my life. It's a job that takes experience, knowledge and wisdom. If you will all help me, I might make our little kingdom safe for the younger generation."

A sudden intelligence came into the face of her friend.

"You are giving yourself toward a cause!"

"I have learned that spending, not only money, but brains, intellect, knowledge, as well is a parent's duty."

And the success or failure of Mrs. Van Sant's experiment with the Flappers nest, may be judged by the fact that within a year there was at least one marriage in the group that her daughter and the young man who had urged her so to change things—and at least half a dozen engagements were announced in ready order.

Weather Conditions.

Cloudy and showery weather continues over most of the country from the Rocky Mountains eastward to the Atlantic coast. The rains, during the last 24 hours, were light except in Western Iowa, Nebraska and Northwestern Kansas, where heavy to excessive rains occurred.

The temperature changes were slight. High pressure over the Far Northwest is producing celar skies and moderately cool weather over that section.

River Conditions.

Light to locally heavy rains over the district caused further slight rises in the rivers. Stage at Pittsburgh is 13.7 feet; Dam No. 2, 8.8, and Dam No. 6, 13.1. The dams are down. The rivers will remain practically stationary during the next 24 hours.

ROB CITY GARAGE

THEFTS MADE IN 18 MONTHS REVEALED

Mayor Charles H. Kline today summoned William Monahan, superintendent of the municipal garage, for a conference in the probe of thefts of accessories from the city garage. No arrests have been made, but several city employes will be asked to tell what they know of the thefts. The Mayor has had members of the automobile squad of city detectives working on the case for several weeks.

Complaints from Monahan, forwarded to the mayor, charged that for 18 months accessories valued at thousands of dollars have been disappearing. The thefts stopped for a short period when a watch was kept on the storerooms, but were resumed when the watch was lessened.

Lieut. Edward O'Rourke of the automobile squad "planted" a sleuth in the garage and they learned several days ago of the sale of city goods to residents of Armstrong county. The detectives recovered tires and accessories that were said to have been sold by city employes.

Kent Takes Kitten To His Office to Hear Her Story

MRS. BRIGGS appeared as they were finishing a dreary dinner. "'Tis a crool time for old bones, Mrs. Day, dear; what with the dampness in the ground. No longer ago nor yesterday, mind you, I was sayin' the same to the cook an' she answers me, 'What you grumblin' for, Briggs, with the peace an' quiet we'll be havin' an' that one gone out of the house?' An' I says—"

Emily leaned forward. "Who's gone, Mrs. Briggs? Who's gone out of the house?"

"An' I was just gettin' to that, Emily. It's herself this time 'stead of the husband, poor creature. Sudden-like it was last night when she comes in late an' sends for me.

"'Pack my trunks, Briggs,' says she, a-blowin' smoke into my face. 'I'm leavin' tomorrow,' says she, 'an I'll not be back for a while.' An' good riddance, says I to myself though nothin' to the like of her, mind you."

"You—you mean Avis?" Emily's throat was dry and tight. "You mean Avis has gone?"

"She'll be leavin' for Yurrup the night, barrin' accident. I'm that done in with packin' five trunks. An'—"

But Emily didn't hear the rest. She was out and away, up the lane on the hill.

She flung herself over fences, fought through a hedge, came up at Highcliffe with torn hands and a jagged welt across her cheek. She demanded Mr. Rossiter.

"There is no one at home, Miss," said the butler down his nose.

"But I've got to see someone!"

"Sorry, Miss. Mr. and Mrs. Rossiter are at Tuxedo."

"But Avis—"

"Mrs. Van Alstyne has gone abroad," he replied coldly. And shut the door.

She turned, feeling as if life were draining out at her finger-tips. Her feet carried her home; she was too dazed to think.

Mrs. Briggs still was talking with Agnes and Emily sank down on the steps. It was then she heard a motor coming at high speed along the street.

CHAPTER L.

WHEN Kent asked Kitten to his office he had an idea that a few friendly questions might elicit some over-looked bit of information; something to help solve the mystery of Nicky Wickert's death at Deep Valley Inn.

So far the Sheriff had made little progress. Two deputies assigned to the case, shrewd fellows though they were, kept bringing up against a blank wall.

No one had entered the private dining room after Pete, the waiter, had taken in a tray full of cocktails; Pete had gone off duty in his rather fuddled way without bothering about the check. And no one had stepped in to lock the outside door. The Inn was run in a somewhat casual manner.

The old watchman, smoking his pipe out where the cars were parked, had seen a woman silhouetted for a moment against the window under the veranda and later had noticed someone in white going down the drive.

But this, probably, was Kitten; he had paid no particular attention to what happened about the house; his job was to look after the cars.

Things didn't appear very bright for the little Day girl. But she was innocent in the eyes of the law. Kent sometimes had to remind himself of this. It was best for a District Attorney to regard circumstantial evidence as a besetting temptation and not allow himself to be carried away by it.

So he called Kitten in and realized that he could expect no co-operation from her. Her lawyer had warned her against talking and she was defiant.

But her assertion that the woman who came into the private dining room that night had a "funny way of saying things," interested Kent. Mrs. Wickert had a Spanish accent; was the woman Nicky's wife?

"No, I saw her once," Kitten objected. "I'd have known her."

She wouldn't tell how or where she had seen Bianca Wickert and he kept turning the theory in his mind. He had heard, of course, about the night the one-time Spanish dancer had gone to the Yacht Club with her little pearl-handled revolver.

He remembered something being said about the disturbance when Bianca was taken out of the club by the back way. He had a vague feeling this might be important but he couldn't recall the facts at the moment and filed it away in his thought for future consideration.

Five o'clock went by and 6 and still he had not broken through the hostility of the girl before him; the girl with her ridiculously gay looking head thrown back and her eyes green and wary.

He gave over the attempt in the end and stood up. Rising quickly, Kitten glanced through the window—caught her breath in a furious, half strangled cry. Dashing to the sill she leaned far out—might have fallen had he not caught her arm.

"It's her again," she cried. "The woman—you see? In that car—oh, let me go! I'll catch her; let me go, I say!"

But he held fast, turned her about, gripping both arms so she faced him in spite of her struggles. Over her shoulders he could see the long, green roadster sweep up the street and his sister's red hat a point of color in the distance.

He was very white. "You know what you're saying, Kathryn?"

"You ask me that? She's the one, I tell you! I never saw her before that night. This is the second time—oh, you'll hold me here, keep me while she gets away!" She had stopped struggling and was looking at him, eyes a-flame. He could not doubt her sincerity.

"No. You can go now. She won't get away."

When she had left he moved slowly to his desk. He sat a long time with his head in his hands, there while the summer dark gathered.

But his roadster was speeding when Emily, from her place on the steps, heard and walked out to the road.

It was a new Kent who faced her. She had a vivid impression of the boy she had known suddenly become a man; one whose drawn lips never again would wear quite the merry smile she remembered so well. Regret, went through her as she looked at him in a frozen way.

"Your sister told you, Emily? She thought she saw the woman from my window tonight. You know?"

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

With Mid-Summer Social Lull On, Leaders Here Already Look to Fall Season

"IF SUMMER comes, can fall be far behind?"

I hope I may be forgiven the misquotation, but I have just heard of two or three affairs definitely set for the autumn and it is rather pleasant to remember that this midsummer quiet won't last forever. "The season" will be with us within a couple of months, and I suppose we will be complaining about the rush of social affairs.

One of the fall events in which I am sure you will be interested is Pauline Page's wedding in September. Pauline is a daughter of the George Stevens Pages, of Thomas boulevard, you know, and I hear that she has decided on Saturday, September 15, for her marriage to Lesslie Stockton Howell, son of the C. H. S. Howells, of Haverford, Pa. The wedding will take place in Calvary Episcopal Church.

No doubt you know that Pauline is a granddaughter of William Page, the noted portrait painter of New York and Florence, Italy. She is a Thurston girl and was graduated in 1925 from Smith. Her fiance is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1919.

ANOTHER autumn date set is the debut party for Katherine McKibbin Schley, daughter of Charles Schley, of this city. Her grandmother, Mrs. Chambers McKibbin, is planning to give a tea on November 7 in the Hotel Schenley, I understand, to introduce her. Katherine is a Thurston girl, too, you know.

* * *

MRS. GARRETT DENISE BROWNE, of Brookline, Mass., who has been entertained so widely during her visit in Sewickley, is going to be guest of honor at still another party tonight. The Benjamin R. B. Townsends will be hosts, giving a bridge supper in their home, "Fairway," Sewickley Heights. Mrs. Browne, you know, is the house guest of her sister, Mrs. Stuart H. Robinson, of "The Barracks," Sewickley.

I HOPE that this rain which has spoiled nearly every day lately will hold off next Thursday, when Margaret Crutchfield's marriage to Andrew Tod Roy is scheduled to be solemnized in the garden of her home. The hour set is 5:30 o'clock, and the ceremony will be performed by the Rev. William Crowe IV, of Tuscumbia, Ala., Margaret's cousin. Margaret is a daughter of the James Stapleton Crutchfields, of Sewickley, and, of course, will be given in marriage by her father.

Her four sisters will be her attendants, I am told. Harriet is going to be the maid of honor and Catherine, Alice and Grace will be the bridesmaids. Mr. Roy's brother-in-law, Dr. Robert Hugh Robertson, of Pittsburgh, will be his best man and the ushers will include Henry Pitney Van Dusen, of Philadelphia; Albin Pilkington Crowe, of St. Louis; Albin Pilkington Crutchfield, Margaret's brother, and Robert Taylor, of Pittsburgh.

The young Roys' plans include a year's study in Edinburgh, Scotland. Mr. Roy is a delegate to the World Youth and Peace Conference to be held August 12 in [illegible]land.

T[illegible]unior Case A. Fosters have [illegible]rned from their wedding [illegible] I hear, and are at home in [illegible]shington avenue, Carnegie. The [illegible]osters were married on June 30, you may remember, and since then they have been motoring in Canada, spending most of the time in Quebec. Mrs. Foster was Ruth Leslie Hess, of Clarion, before she was married.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. THADDEUS MERRIMAN, of Riverside [illegible]ive, New York, have made [illegible]nown the engagement of their [illegible]ughter, Miss Margaret Mather [illegible]erriman, to Wilber George Parks, of this city, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Hanna, of Pittsburgh. Miss Merriman is a granddaughter of the late Thomas W. Mather, of the Yale Sheffield Scientific School, and of the late Mansfield Merriman, of Lehigh University, and a great-granddaughter of William James Linton, the English poet and wood engraver. She was graduated from Vassar in 1925 and in 1928 earned the degree of master of arts in chemistry from Columbia. Mr. Parks was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1926 and he also won his A. M. in chemistry at Columbia in 1928. A fall wedding is planned.

MISS THOMASINE ROSE, daughter of Thomas L. Rose, of Beacon street, and Reuben Maury, of Butte, Mont., and New York, were married this morning at 9:30 o'clock in St. George's Chapel, Harbison square, New York, by the Rev. Robert Remmington.

The bride is a graduate of Sweet Briar College, and Mr. Maury is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity. He is an editorial writer for a New York paper, and an author of several books.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage of Miss Alma Dapper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Dapper, of Clifton boulevard, Carrick, and Charles J. Portman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Portman, of Carnegie, which was solemnized Wednesday in St. Wendelin's Catholic Church. Miss Camille Fuhr was her cousin's maid of honor and Eugene Portman was his brother's best man. A breakfast for the families followed the ceremony in the Hotel Schenley. Mr. and Mrs. Portman are motoring in Canada and after August 15 will be at home in Carnegie.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage of Miss Martyna V. Foley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Foley, of Pittsburgh, and Harold C. Jenny, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Janny, of Austria, were married July 10 at the Werder summer home in New Florence, Pa. Herman Werder gave his sister in marriage. Mrs. Gerard J. Werder, of Buffalo, was the bride's only attendant, and Gerard J. Werder was best man.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 21.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Williams, Charleston, W. Va., motor tourists, and three Lancaster county motorists were hurt yesterday in a collision near here. Williams was able to leave the Allentown Hospital, but Mrs. Williams is a patient there.

SECESSIONIST SAYS LEWIS LOST STRIKE

"The coal strike in Pennsylvania and Ohio is lost and the United Mine Workers' organization destroyed," declared John J. Watt, leader of the rebellious faction which has seceded from the union and is endeavoring to form a new national miners' union, in a statement yesterday. He blamed John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers, for the situation, saying that in abandoning the Jacksonville scale Lewis had placed the striking miners at the mercy of the operators.

"The only hope of the miners," said Watt, "is in building the new union, which will be organized at a national convention to be held in Pittsburgh September 9 to 16."

KITTANNING - FORD CITY ROAD BLOCKED BY SLIDE

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 21.—(AP.)—A large landslide of approximately 2,500 cubic yards of earth has necessitated inauguration of one-way traffic on Route No. 66 between Kittanning and Ford City, according to an announcement of the State Highway Department. The slide resulted from heavy rains and its removal is expected to require a week.

Grise Awarded $6,500 for Raid Vandalism

With James F. Malone voting no, Council yesterday awarded Oliver Grise $6,500 for damages to his hotel at 47 Eleventh street during a raid by city police last November, in the course of which the barroom, diningroom and kitchen were wrecked.

"I don't see why the city should pay for this depredation, said to have been done by the police, when all of the officers concerned still are on the payroll," said Malone, explaining his vote.

PATTERSON HEIGHTS SITE BARRED AS FLYING FIELD

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., July 21.—Beaver Valley communities may join in a movement to purchase a landing field for mail airplanes. W. O. Snyder, superintendent of the airport division, United States Department of Commerce, speaking before the Lions Club here, said the Patterson Heights field was unsatisfactory. He recommended Beaver Valley communities get together and purchase a field immediately if they desire mail airplane service.

REVENUE OFFICE GIVES TO BABY FUND

Once more the internal revenue office has made a gift to The Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund, this time of $6.25, which has brought the fund to a total of $653.26. And there are whispers that some one is making a nice big gift, one that will take the fund sailing right over the top of $700. Isn't that splendid and encouraging?

The Pittsburgh and Allegheny Milk and Ice Association is in need of even more money than the fund at present represents, for with the coming of these sultry days, more and more mothers are despairing of doing anything to help their ailing little ones and are appealing to the Association for help. In some cases (but they are very few), the mothers are able to pay a little towards the milk that is furnished their babies. It is this quart of milk a day to every baby that is the Association's greatest expense, for it takes $1.50 a week to keep each baby supplied with its quart a day of pure, whole milk. Everyone knows the advantages of certified milk over pasteurized in the feeding of infants and particularly do these poor little undernourished mites need the extra vitamins that the certified gives them.

The fund stands today as follows:

Previously reported	$647.01
The Internal Revenue Oiffce	6.25
Total	$653.26

COURT MAY PASS ON SURCHARGES

It's all in how one interprets the law.

At the close of former Controller Charles C. McGovern's public audit of the county's fiscal affairs, he surcharged County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock and former County Commissioner James Houlahen $128,503.56 for alleged private work done by the county. McGovern, now a County Commissioner, in surcharging the county officials was governed by his attorney, Ralph Frank. The attorney maintained the work was illegal.

County Controller Robert G. Woodside, reviewing his predecessor's actions, and on advice of his solicitor, Arch W. Powell, ordered the surcharges stricken from county records. "The action was unwarranted, illegal and improper," Attorney Powell advised.

The court probably will decide which attorney is wrong and give an interpretation of the law. Commissioner McGovern, with his attorney, is studying Controller Woodside's reasons for exonerating the commissioners. An exception to the controller's action probably will be filed in court to determine who is right.

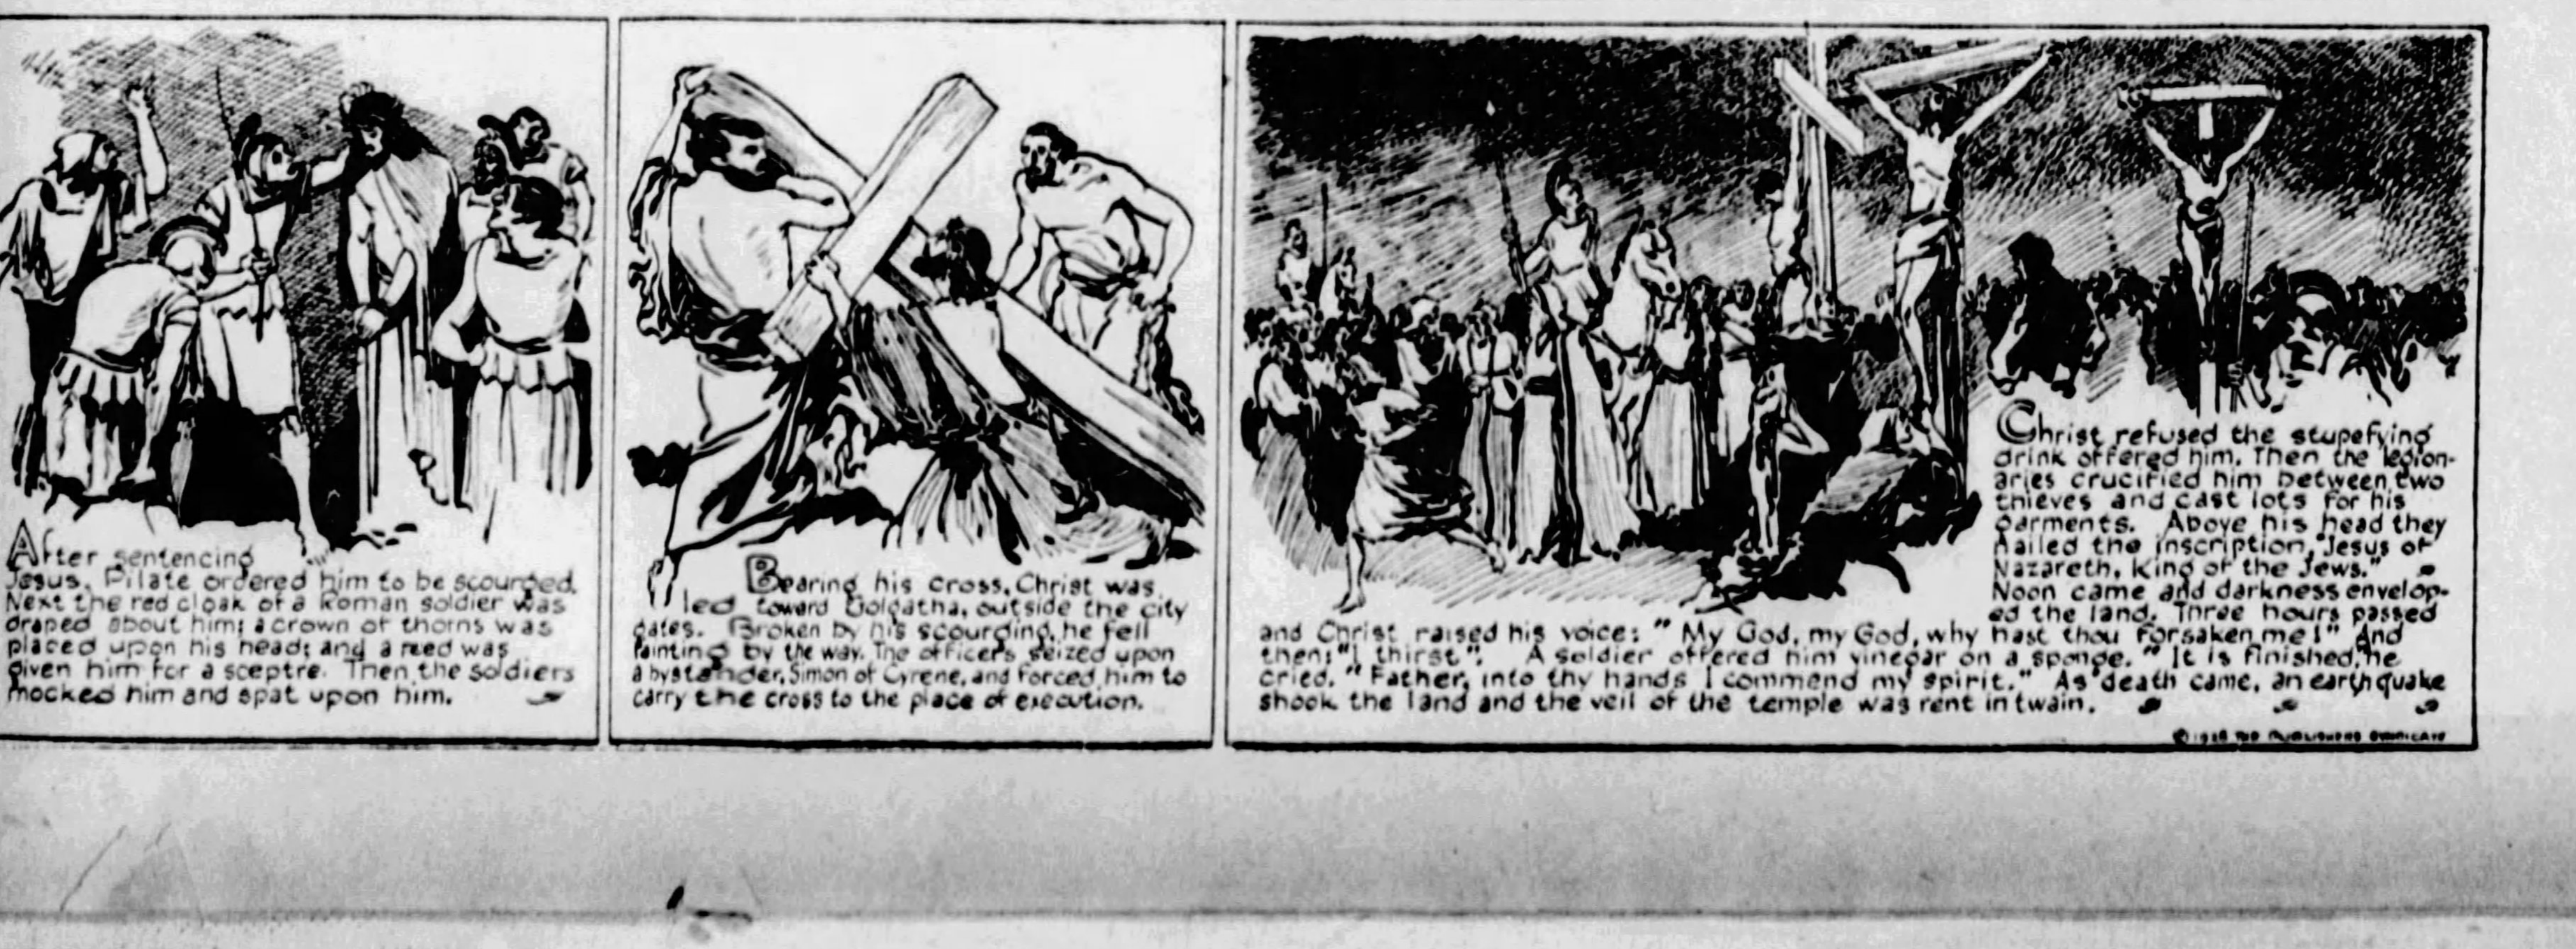
THE CRUCIFIXION

Sunday School Lesson
Mark 15:16-47

By Harlowe R. Hoyt, Walter Scott



After sentencing Jesus, Pilate ordered him to be scourged. Next the red cloak of a Roman soldier was draped about him; a crown of thorns was placed upon his head; and a reed was given him for a sceptre. Then the soldiers mocked him and spat upon him.
Bearing his cross, Christ was led toward Golgatha, outside the city gates. Broken by his scourging, he fell fainting by the way. The officers seized upon a bystander, Simon of Cyrene, and forced him to carry the cross to the place of execution.
Christ refused the stupefying drink offered him. Then the legionaries crucified him between two thieves and cast lots for his garments. Above his head they nailed the inscription, "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews." Noon came and darkness enveloped the land. Three hours passed and Christ raised his voice: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!" And then: "I thirst." A soldier offered him vinegar on a sponge. "It is finished," he cried. "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." As death came, an earthquake shook the land and the veil of the temple was rent in twain.

ROBINS, BUCS IN DUAL BILL TODAY

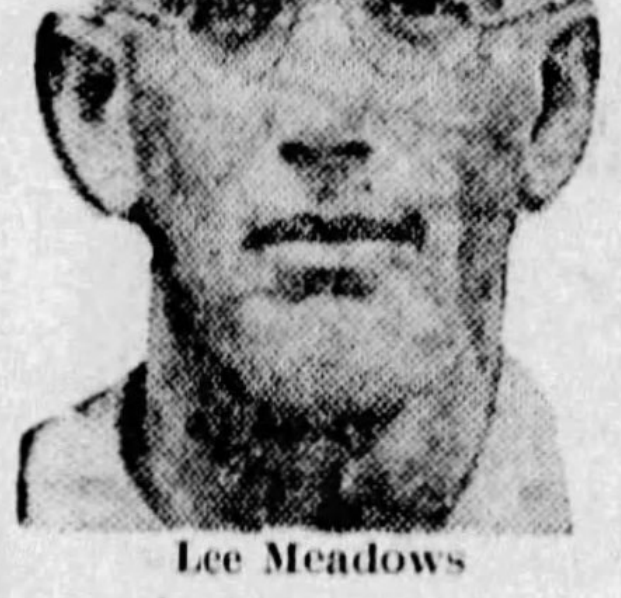
U. S. IN CHALLENGE ROUND

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Meadows to Start Game for First Time This Season—Has Worked Only One Inning. McGraw Carrying Five Left-Hand Pitchers, Record Number for Him.

LOOK who's here!. A familiar Pirate figure in the past, but who hasn't been seen in action here for so long that the fans may find it difficult to recognize him when he steps on the mound at Forbes Field this afternoon.



Lee Meadows

Manager Donie Bush has decided to send Meadows in the second game of today's double-header with the Robins, and it will be the first time that the bespectacled veteran has started a championship contest this season.

SINCE the 1928 race got under way Meadows has pitched only one inning for the Bucs in a National League game, though he has been used in a couple of exhibitions.

Lee's lone inning in a championship debate was pitched at Chicago on Sunday, June 24. After Kremer and Dawson had been withdrawn, and the score stood 7 to 1 against the Rovers, Meadows was sent in to work the final against the Cubs. He gave them one more run on two walks, a bunt, a single and a sacrifice fly.

MEADOWS, until this year, had been a Pirate mainstay ever since the Pittsburgh club obtained him with Second Baseman Johnny Rawlings, from the Phillies on May 23, 1923, in exchange for Pitcher Whitey Glazner, Second Baseman Cotton. Tierney and $25,000 in cash. This year he has been out of commission from the start on account of a sore arm, which appears finally to have yielded to treatment. The second event today will be the test. The Bucs will hav played 84 of their 154 games when Lee takes his first turn on the slab.

JOHN McGRAW is going in for left-handers these days. The The latest pitcher of tha type is Carl Hubbell, tried once by Detroit and obtained by the Giants recently from Beaumont in the Texas League. Hubbell's arrival gives the New York club a total of no fewer than five southpaws, or almost enough to make up a complete slab staff.

The four other left-handers on the Gotham crew are Frank Henry, Jim Faulkner, Bill Walker and Garland Buckeye. A sixth southpaw, Art Johnson, is hurling for Jersey City under a Giant option. Few teams ever have had five unorthodox flingers at one time. Cleveland was the only club in recent years to carry that many. In one season they had Buckeye, Sherrod Smith, Joe Shaute, Jim Edwards and Watson Clark.

John McGraw

M'GRAW says he cannot recall ever having carried as many as five southpaws before. In 1917 he won a pennant with three fine left-handers in Fred Schupp, Rube Benton and Slim Sallee.

It is recalled by Will Wedge that southpaws often have figured prominently in McGraw's successes. Rube Marquard was in his heyday when the Giants copped the National League flag in 1913, and Art Nehf was a mainstay in the Giant pennant years of 1921, 1922, 1923 and 1924.

HUBBELL, the newest Giant southsider, says that as a high school lad he had a pitching feud with Lloyd Waner of the Pirates. It was not known here that Lloyd ever had done any pitching, but Hubbell says that when he was hurling for Meeker (Okla). High School, the younger Waner was twirling for McCloud (Okla.) High School, 17 miles from Meeker. "We had some right smart pitching battles, Lloyd and I," said Hubbell. "We played against each other three years. Lloyd was a good pitcher. I was surprised when I read he had become an outfielder. I never saw much of him after high school days, though he did come through out country once with a basketball team."

TAKING age into the reckoning, old Jack Quinn of the Athletics is one of the outstanding pitchers of the big leagues this year. Though the record books have him tabbed as 43 years old, he is said to be beyond the 45-year mark, but in spite of this the veteran who pitched his first professional ball for Connellsville in 1903, appears to be gaining instead of losing.

Jack Quinn

In former years it was said that Quinn could not pitch successfully in hot weather and could hardly win a game after June, but the old boy is making that dope look ridiculous this season. Only a few days ago he turned in his twelfth victory of the campaign, and, as he has been defeated only four times, it follows that he has won 75 per cent of his engagements. He has pitched 124 innings to date. Last season he won 15 games and lost 10. His present pace indicates that he may not only beat his 1927 total of victories but may come close to scoring 20, a feat that numerous younger hurlers rarely succeed in accomplishing.

QUINN says he cannot explain how he does it, but suggests that perhaps the younger boys coming up cannot hit the old spitter as they did when many pitchers were using that delivery.

The vet has a two-speed spitball that has made lots of trouble for American League sluggers, according to another old-timer.

"THERE'S nothing remarkable about my pitching," Quinn is quoted. "I just try to have my control so that I can place the ball exactly where I want it to go. Perhaps my diet has something to do with my success on hot days this year. I last all day on a pint of milk, and eat a heavy meal only in the evenings."

How good Quinn's control is may be judged from the fact that he has given only 16 bases on balls in the 124 innings he has pitched.

TOMMY ARMOUR WINS METROPOLITAN CROWN

WESTFIELD, N. J., July 21.—(AP.)—Tommy Armour, professional from the Congressional Country Club in Washington, won the twenty-first annual Metropolitan open golf championship over the Shackamaxon Country Club course with a score of 278, 10 under par, for the 72 holes.

Armour's total equals the record for the championship, established in 1914 at Scarsdale by MacDonald Smith, who is now pro at the Lakeville Golf and Country Club, Great Neck, Long Island.

In winning, Armour displaced as metropolitan open title holder, Johnny Farrell. Farrell finished second with a score of 280. Leo Diegel, playing representative of the Fenimore Country Club near New York, was third, his total being 284.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

A LOT of baseball will be on tap at the Oakland Orchard this afternoon, weather permitting. The pesky Robins, who have trimmed Our Pirates twice in two days, will take on the Freebooters in a bargain bill which will be in the nature of a farewell to local fans as the Buccos leave on their second Eastern excursion tonight. Play this afternoon will start at 1:45.

The excitement of today will be enlivened by the first appearance of the season of Lee Meadows, one of the Pirate slab aces of the past few years, who has not been able to pitch so far this season on account of a sore arm. Meadows has been working regularly for the past several weeks in an effort to get in shape. He apparently thinks he is ready to pitch, so he will get a chance to start the second game of the dual bill.

Carmen Hill will work the first of today's scraps.

Uncle Robbie is expected to counter with Rube Ehrhardt and Ray Moss, with a chance that Knoxville Bill Doak will swing into action in one of the contests.

Robbie used up his three star southpaws yesterday as the Dodgers took a hair-line decision over the Pirates. A rainstorm falling in the second inning held up the fight for 15 minutes, and the shower is thought to have interfered with the pitching performance of Remy Kremer, who was shelled off the hill during the downpour of the second round. It also is possible that the showers hurt the effectiveness of Jess Petty, who was nicked for four Pittsburgh runs after two Pirates were out in the opening stanza.

KREMER ROUTED

The French ace appeared to be in possession of his stuff at the outset, despite the run scored by Scoops Carey, who opened the game with a single. Remy lost his control as well as his stuff in the second, and the Robins were slamming

Big Bill May Play Despite Ban

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, AUTEUIL, France, July 21.—(AP.)—America today defeated Italy in the interzone final of Davis Cup play and thereby won the right to play the French holders of the cup here beginning next Friday in the challenge round for the trophy.

The American victory, without the services of Bill Tilden, was scored in straight sets and straight matches. The American doubles team of George Lott and John Hennessey won the deciding match today by defeating the Italians, Baron Humbert de Morpurgo and Placido Gaslini, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Amerca won the first two singles matches yesterday.

TILDEN MAY PLAY

PARIS, July 21.—(AP.)—Samuel H. Collom, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, has reserved the right to nominate Bill Tilden for the Davis Cup challenge round despite the ineligibility ruling and has so advised New York officials, according to reliable sources.

President Collom refused to make a statement prior to the third Davis Cup match with the issue of the inter-zone finals still in the balance, but it was understood that he had declared to take a definite stand after a conference with international authorities. It was believed that he would seek suspension of judgment until after the challenge round and play Tilden, especially since the French had expressed such a desire.

Big Bill was non-commital when asked as to his chance to get in the competion. "Well, I'm keeping in shape anyway and am ready for any developments, good or bad," he said. "Naturally I'd like the chance to play the French."

DEAD HEAT FEATURES EMPIRE CITY RACING

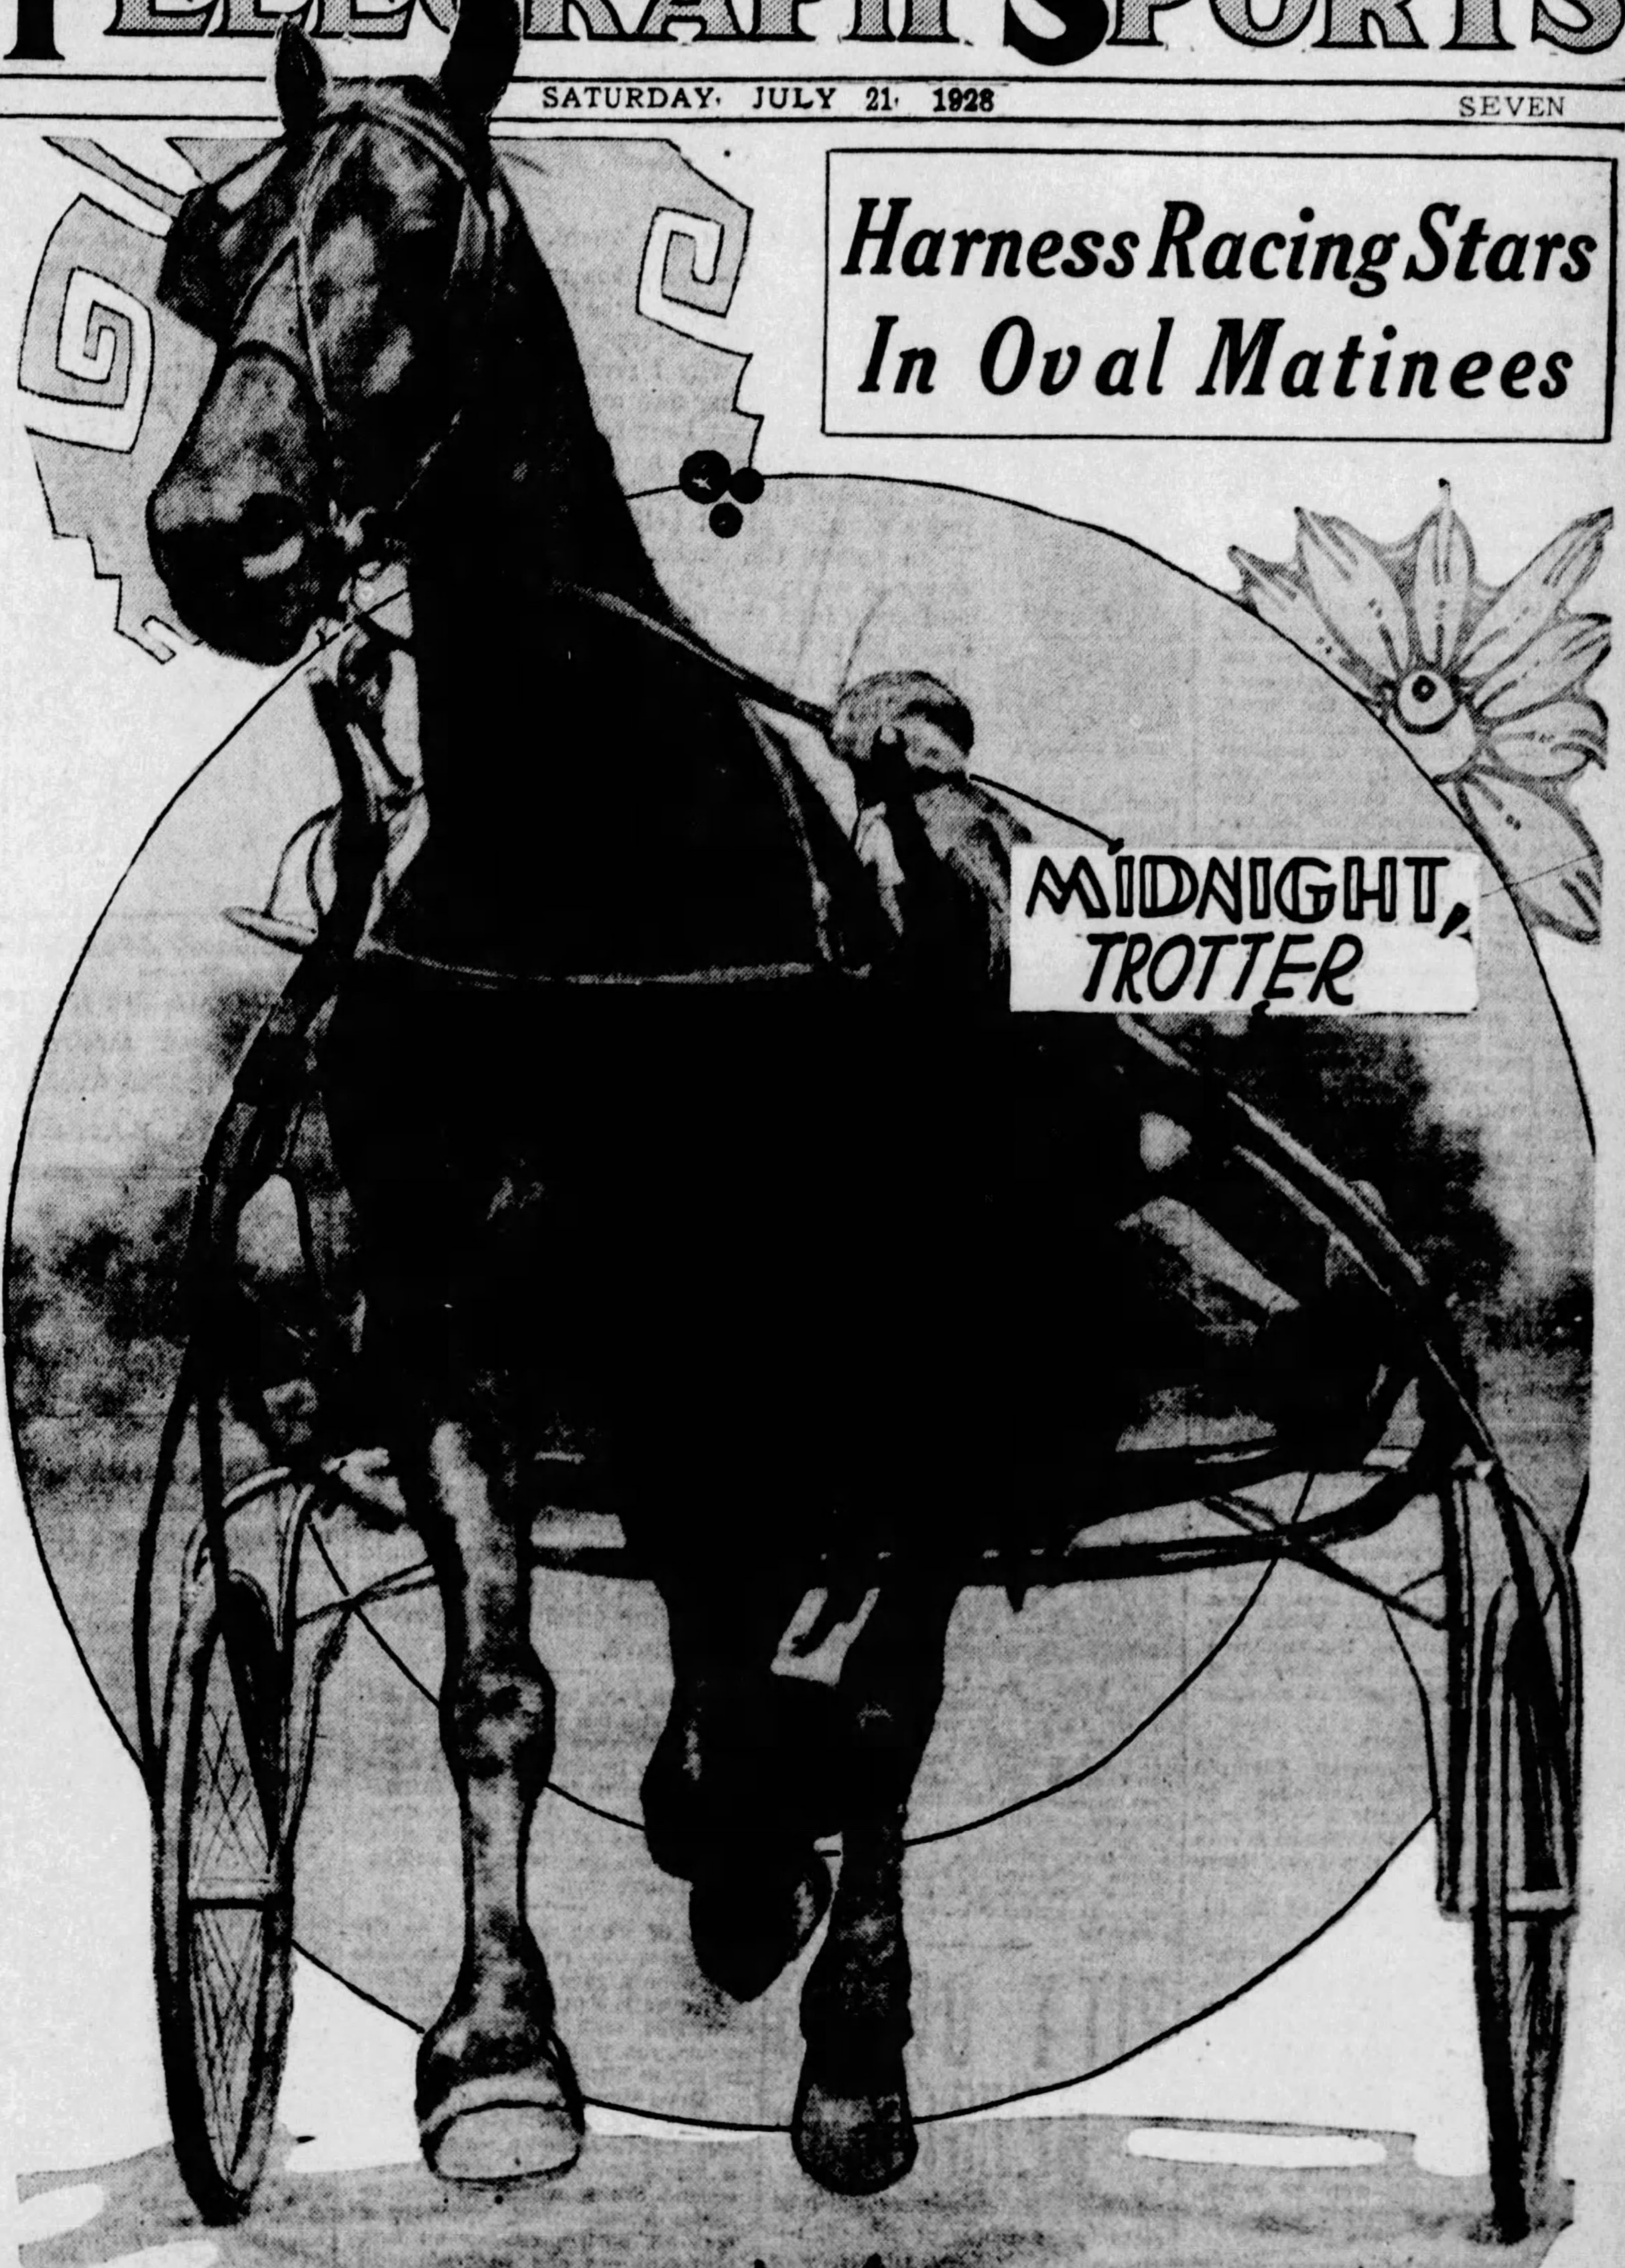
NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—A dead heat—the first in several years on eastern tracks—featured a mediocre card at the Empire City race track yesterday.

The dead heat came in the second race, a claiming affair for three-year-olds and up. P. S. Dean's Buddha and J. P. McGovern's Sambeau came to the finish line on even terms and there was nothing for the placing judges to do but declare a dead heat. Trainers of the two horses decided not to run off the tie and the purse was divided. All bets made on the two horses were split.

SOX BUY HURLER

BOSTON, July 21.—(AP.)—The Red Sox have announced the purchase of Marty Griffin, right-handed pitcher, from the Fort Worth club of the Texas League. Griffin will report to the Sox on July 25, at Cleveland.

Harness Racing Stars In Oval Matinees



GOOD ONE

Midnight is a black gelding owned by J. D. Callery, long a patron of the Schenley Matinee Club, which celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary this week. The horse is being driven by Dave McDonald, one of the leading spirits in the local harness racing world for years, but his face is not visible in the picture as the animal bears down on the photographer.

ALL FOUR FEET OFF THE GROUND

Here is a fine study of contrasts in harness racing form. Arion Silk was snapped with all four feet off the ground during a workout on Schenley Oval, where matinees are held free to the public every Wednesday afternoon during the season. Compare the gait of the pacer with that of Midnight, the trotter, above. The pacer has both legs on one side hitting the turf at one time, in swinging, sidelong fashion, while the trotter picks up and lays down his feet one at a time. Arion Silk is a bay mare, owned by B. B. McGinnis, who is in the sulky in the picture.

ST. CLAIR NEW JUNIOR CHAMP

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Denny St. Clair reigns today as the new Western Pennsylvania junior golf champion. The Kiski youth, after a fairly easy semi-final match yesterday morning against a clubmate, Harry Ramsey, which he won 4 and 3, played fine golf to down the defending champion, Fred Brand, Jr., Sewickley Y. M. C. A. youth 2 up.

Brand, tournament medalist, won over George Orcutt of the Corry Country Club in his morning semi-final engagement, 3 and 2. His medal score in his match with St. Clair was 77, one stroke better than St. Clair's 78.

D. E. Mitchell won in the finals of the second flight, defeating X ier Totten of Stanton Heights 4 and 2. Bill Gillespie also of Stanton Heights won the honors in the third flight by beating H. M. Tomb, Jr., 4 and 3.

HEENEY SPENDS DAY AT SEA

FAIRHAVEN, N. J., July 21.—(AP.)—The broiling heat yesterday caused Tom Heeney, challenger for the world's heavyweight championship, to suspend all training activities. Instead of walloping his sparring mates, Heeney deserted the camp as early as 8 o'clock and spent the entire day on the Atlantic ocean in search of a cooling breeze. He was the guest of a Rumson resident on his private yacht.

Heeney was absent from camp from morning until night and did not even take his customary run on the road. He was up, however, at 4:30 o'clock to take a long walk in the cool of the morning.

Rain yesterday afternoon served to cool the atmosphere somewhat. The heat has been a constant annoyance to the challenger. He dreads working in the gymnasium because he drops off weight sa rapidly. He melted off nearly five pounds Thursday.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS by HARRY KECK SPORTS EDITOR

AT the banquet at which The Sun-Telegraph's prizes to the winners of its junior and sub-junior golf tournament were presented the other night, there was considerable talk about the growth of golf in this country and several times the game was referred to by speakers as the new "national pastime."

County Commissioner E. V. Babcock, who made the presentations, had just returned from a three weeks' jaunt across the country, and he said he was impressed by the golfing activity everywhere he went. John Jay Burke, a member of the public links executive committee of the U. S. G. A., and an ardent worker in the cause of free courses, stressed the value of such layouts to a community. Other speakers were similarly enthusiastic.

"IT is gratifying," Burke told the writer in a side conversation, "to note that the city and county officials everywhere are becoming conscious of the advantages of golf. Formerly when we tried to get a hearing on golf we were told that only a small percentage of persons played the game and that the majority had to be catered to in the matter of playgrounds an other similar facilities. In Allegheny county, for instance, there are about a million people. About 30,000 use the Schenley Park links. That is only 3 per cent of the population, but when the two new courses in the North and South county parks are ready there will be facilities for at least twice that many more and they will be in demand.

"Only a man or woman who has played a round of golf knows the exhilaration and health that come from participation in the sport. Sitting in a grandstand and watching two teams of baseball or football players in a game cannot approach it. Golf gives the individual the benefit of the exercise, and good health and a feeling of buoyed spirits follow."

IF there remains any suspicion that golf does not have a popular appeal, how can one account for the fact that the one-day tournament sponsored by The Sun-Telegraph for the William Randolph Hearst trophy attracted more than 600 entries ranging in age from 7 years to 18, of whom more than 500 teed off, with few failing to turn in cards?

The grown-ups may have their country clubs and monopolize the public links, but a new army of enthusiasts is coming on and the game is going ahead by leaps and bounds. Baseball may remain the national pastime from the viewpoint of large crowds and general interest in the pennant races, but there is little or no doubt that golf as a sport in which the individual can compete already has it backed off the boards, and the public officials who provide facilities in keeping with its growth are performing a real service.

Health is priceless, and, as Mr. Burke so aptly put it, a round of golf now and then is the finest tonic in the world. What the game has done for the rundown business man in the past it is doing now for players of all ages and both sexes.

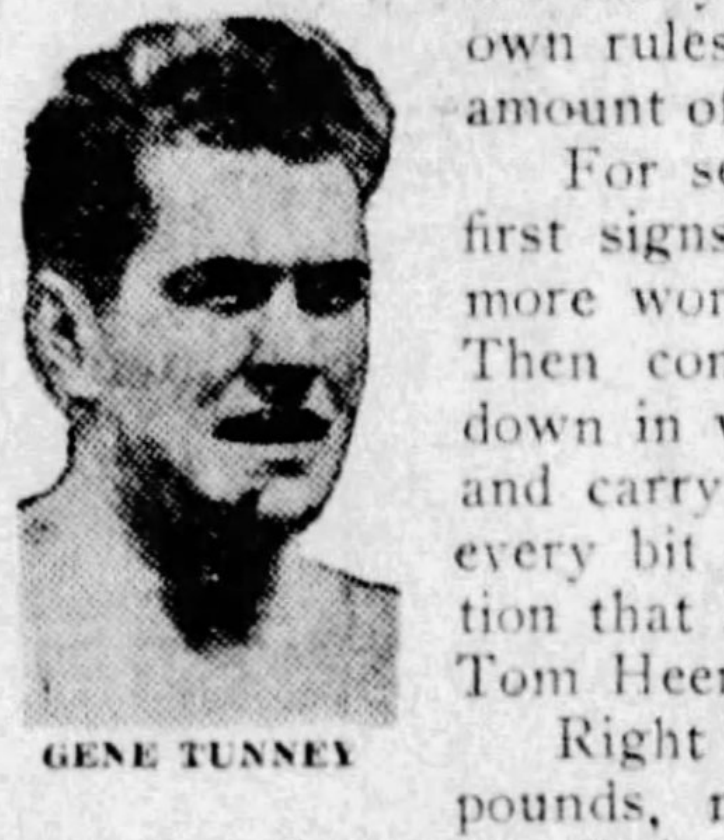
Needs One More Drill

By GENE TUNNEY,
Heavyweight Champion of the World.

SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 21.—Every boxer knows better than his trainers and handlers ever can the precise moment when the peak of physical perfection arrives. That is one of the many reasons why I prefer to dictate my own rules of training and regulate myself the amount of work that I am to do each day.



GENE TUNNEY

For several days I have been feeling the first signs of the approaching "peak." One more workout and I believe it will be here. Then comes the tapering off, the slowing down in work, and the careful effort to hold and carry into the ring next Thursday night every bit of the keeness and physical perfection that I have gained for my match with Tom Heeney.

Right now I am weighing close to 190 pounds, my best fighting weight, but the poundage itself has little to do with the feeling that "ring readiness" is just around the corner. I have been hovering around that weight now for a week.

Little things are beginning to bother me, as they do only when the peak is right at hand. I am getting testy about things that have meant nothing up to this point. I can feel within the constant urge to be on the move, to stretch and work my muscles, to get away from people for fear of annoyance.

Luckily for myself, my friends and handlers, this condition is one that comes only once a year and then lasts for only a few days before the match. I know that I am insufferable during that period; everything seems to get on my nerves, and I am literally like a bear with a sore paw.

Once the gloves are on my hands and all the energy that has been stored up in months of training is let loose, I will be normal again. Ten minutes after the bout is over I'd laugh at tiny things that annoy me so now. But for the time being I am rather a strenuous person to live with, and even more so because I know it and can do nothing about it. It is part of the training grind.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Erie, Pa.—Larry Brignolia knocked out Georgie Fifield, 4 rounds; Louis Severo won by a technical knockout over Scotty Wilson, 2 rounds; Young Guido and Joe Cannell drew, 6 rounds.

At Johnstown, Pa.—Ike McFowler defeated Ad Stone, 10 rounds; Gene Baker won by a technical knockout over Dick Gibbons, 1 round; Mike Hogan defeated Frankie Moran, 6 rounds; Johnny Wildner won by a technical knockout over Mike Pote, 5 rounds.

PITT DROPS DEVICTOR

In line with its general policy of replacing members of the old regime in athletics, the University of Pittsburgh Athletic Council has notified Ollive DeVictor, for eight years trainer of its athletic teams, that his services will not be required after September 1. His salary will continue until then and he will take his vacation during the last two weeks of August.

DeVictor today confirmed the report that he had been given his release in writing and said he understood he would be succeeded by Bud Moore, former trainer for Dr. Jock Sutherland, Pitt head coach, when the latter was at Lafayette College, and another man, the pair dividing his duties. DeVictor has been both trainer and in charge of equipment for the Panthers.

Ollie's plans for the future are indefinite. He said he would try to make a connection close to Pittsburgh.

Card Complete For Tunney, Heeney Go

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—The complete card of preliminaries for Gene Tunney's heavyweight title defense against Tom Heeney next Thursday night has been completed.

In six rounders, Johnny Grosso, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., will meet Francisco Cruz, a recent heavyweight importation from Portugal; Germany Heller, of Jersey City, tackles George Larocco, of New York, and Big Boy Peterson, of Minneapolis, opposes Jimmy Byrne, of Louisville, Ky.

Bill Daring, of the United States Navy, is paired with Joe Land, of the Army; Ad Warren, of North Carolina, with George Hoffman, of New York; Henry Fay, of Louisville, with Joe Barlow, of Boston, and Biff Crowley, of the Navy, with Jackie Saunders, of New York, in four rounders.

MISS RYAN WINS

DUSSELDORF, Germany, July 21—(AP.)—Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian now living in England, continued her triumphal sweep through the international tennis tournament here. In the women's singles she defeated Fraulein Kallmyer, 6-2, 6-1; paired with Ronald Boyd, of Argentina, she advanced in the mixed doubles by eliminating Senor and Senora Morales, 6-0, 6-1.

POSTPONE BOUT

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Rain led to postponement of the 10-round bout between King Tut, of Minneapolis, and Roy Miller, hard-hitting Chicago lightweight, set for last night at the Coney Island Stadium. The new date for the match was not announced.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

JOHNNY GOOCH, in his first combat against the club he served so many years, lost three hits through circus fielding by Pie Traynor and Paul Waner. On two occasions Traynor leaped as high as his bounding nature would permit and on each attempt he held a line drive in the pocket of his glove.

While Pie's feats seemed to be almost the last world in fielding thrills, Brother Paul really topped these headliners with a one-hand grass top catch of a falling Texas-leaguer. Paul had to do a stretch act at the finish that showed the slugger at his best in a defensive way.

ALL of which was hard on the sorrel-top receiver who has ever been a good batsman. If you look over the career of Johnny as compared with contemporary receivers you will find he is up near the top in hitting efficiency.

Lloyd Waner is only a boy and he will make a mistake occasionally, but he should guard against a repetition of his slip in the second inning when he tried to make a shoe-string catch of a soft hit with a runner on first and two out and his own side out in front. Under the circumstances Lloyd should have held the hit to a single, thereby holding both runners on their bases. As it was the ball got away for a fluke double, scoring a run.

IT IS true that the Dodgers lambasted Kremer on the top of this hit. Perhaps they would have made as many runs if the ball had been held to a single, but sometimes the different situations change the method of pitching, and all that sort of thing. However, it always is safer to play out the string.

Many fans wonder why Joe Dawson cannot get better results with the stuff and style he shows on the mound. Joe made it tough for himself in the third by walking Elliott with two out, the pass filling the sacks. Carey's double followed and on that hit two runs went over that swayed the old ball game. If a pitcher has not attained control at this stage of the race, with so much hot weather for conditioning, when will he have it?

MANAGER BUSH advanced Pete Scott to the cleanup notch largely because a lefthander was on the mound. But Peterkin was not in the batting form he has been displaying.

Grantham had a strange day at the plate. He made two smashing hits and fanned in a rather docile manner on two other occasions.

CAREY'S all-around play is a feature of the Dodger games. Scoops is roaming the centerfield plot in his customary efficient manner and his batting has featured the recent victories of the Robins.

VOTE TO DISPENSE WITH PAID COACHES

AKRON, O., July 21.—(AP.)—Deciding against further payment of coaches, managers and players in Class A amateur baseball, the National Baseball Association opened its midsummer meeting yesterday.

Board members and delegates listened to a heated argument between H. G. Johnson, of Detroit, who maintained that amateur teams should have the services of the best leaders available and that they should be adequately paid, and John K. Dugan, of Cincinnati, who contended that further remuneration would class them with high school and college coaches and tend to professionalize the game.

HOW BASEBALL'S STARS TWINKLED YESTERDAY

Hack Wilson—Failed to hit in four attempts.

Rogers Hornsby—Did not hit in four times at bat.

Paul Waner—Singled once in four times up.

Harry Heilmann—Got one single in three times at bat.

Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Frank Frisch did not play.

Second Half Tennis Play Opens Today

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

VITAL contests adorn today's card of Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League battles. This afternoon's matches will mark the start of the second half of the circuit campaign and, though rain has thus far occasioned so many postponements that the race is by no means as advanced as ordinarily it should be, the going is even now sufficiently torrid to render all clashes important.

The usual six-tussle bill will prevail. In Section One the pace-setting Stanton Heights outfit of "Toots" Davis will invade College avenue for a session with Howard Moore's East Enders. The Stantonians feel that the fracas will offer them opportunity to augment their lead in the standing.

The hottest engagement of the day looms for the P. A. A. lot, where the Winged Head crew, minus the services of Capt. Dave O'Loughlin, will attempt conclusions with Edgewood. The Suburbanites at present repose deep in the cellar of their section, but only because of defaults. Capt. Moreland declared yesterday that he has roused his regulars from their lethargy and will have a formidable array on hand.

The University Club, with Frank McClintock and Capt. Don Mattern once more on deck, will be at home to the second-place Westinghouse squad.

Section Two holds forth promise of almost equally spirited play. The powerful South Hills contingent, under the direction of husky Karl Wolfe, will entertain George McConn's West Park sextet. Mount Lebanon and Westinghouse, holding forth in the second and third notches respectively, will be slaying each other at Westinghouse. In the remaining lower-bracket fray, Philadelphia Company, with Capt. K. F. McNutt at the helm, will try its luck with Jimmy Mackay's Minnetonka Canoeists on the new Pitt Stadium courts.

TOOLE ALLOWS ORIOLE PROTEST OF GAME

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Baltimore's protest of the second game of a double header against Buffalo at Baltimore on June 12 has been upheld, John Conway Toole, president of the International League, has announced, and the game will be replayed as the second part of a double bill on August 13. The league head refused Baltimore's protest of the first game of the same series.

Both protests were based on the presence of Bill Clymer, who had been suspended, in the ball park when he apparently had no business there. In the instance of the disallowed protest the Buffalo manager had been removed from the bench by the umpire, but later was found in the park.

FISTS FLY AS MAT STARS STAGE BATTLE

CHICAGO, July 21.—(AP.)—Instead of a wrestling match, about 1,000 spectators saw a fist fight when Johnny Meyers, former middleweight mat champion, and Karl Pojello, the Turkish strong man, met last night. When it was all over, the referee awarded the match to Pojello.

From ringside, it appeared that Meyers, who was making his light heavyweight debut, pushed his hand into Pojello's mouth. His opponent counter-attacked with a bite. Then Meyers started fighting and before the referee and police could interfere, the wrestlers were exchanging lefts and rights.

CASTING TOURNEY TODAY

The mid-summer tournament of the Pittsburgh Casting Club of the Izaak Walton League is being held at Carnegie Lake, Highland Park, this afternoon. Bait and fly casting events for both accuracy and distance are open to all who wish to compete. Winners will represent the club in the national casting tourney at Columbus, O., in August.

COLLETT VICTOR

LONDON, July 21.—(AP.)—T. D. Collett, Leander sculler, who was defeated by Joe Wright, Jr., of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto, in one of the preliminaries for the diamond sculls yesterday won the Wingfield sculls, for the championship of the River Thames.

CIVICS AT ST. JOHN'S

The North Side Civics will be the attraction at Sullivan Field this evening, meeting the St. John's nine in a City League engagement. Manager McGrady has Carson primed to pitch this important game while Pemberton will probably take the mound for the North Siders.

KIRSCHNER, STOVER WIN

The leaders in each of the three flights follow:

PIRATES

him hard when Joe Dawson went to the mound.

Dawson's work was both bad and good. His worst faux pas was in the third, when he walked Big Jim Elliott with two out, the pass filling the bases. Carey followed with a dinky hit to short left that scored two runs and played a big part in the Dodger success. Scoops had two hits that were clean, but his high loft with the bases loaded was just out of the reach of Pete Scott.

Trailing by four runs as they went into the fifth, the Buccos, aided by an infield slip, rushed across three tallies in the inning, Dick Bartell's three-bagger being the pivotal punch of the inning.

But, despite all the unusual quirks of the game, the Pirates probably would have galloped to victory had Dave Bancroft been elsewhere in the seventh round with the tying and winning markers on the sacks, one out and Hargreaves at bat.

For years Banny has blasted Pittsburgh rallies with his smart cleverness. On the latest occasion he made a cat-like lunge toward his left, speared a hot Hargreaves grounder in one hand just as the ball was going into center field, and then recovered in time to get two Pirates and save the lead of the Dodgers. Yes, folks, you can blame that defeat on Bancroft, who probably would have got more "kick" out of it had Earl Smith hit the ball.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR OWN "TRAFFIC COP?"

FRIEND OF YOURS?

When the "traffic cop" at your corner smiles at you in the morning, afternoon and evening, can you call him by name? Few can but almost all would like to do so. The Sun-Telegraph each day publishes the picture of one of the city's traffic officers and his name on the following day. Do you know this man above?

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS EDWARD F. LIMEGROVER, MARRIED, 4051 LIBERTY AVENUE, WHO TELLS PEOPLE AND DRIVERS WHEN TO STOP AND GO AT GRANT STREET AND SIXTH AVENUE. TWO OF HIS NINE YEARS' SERVICE HAVE BEEN SPENT IN THE TRAFFIC DIVISION.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

JOHN FULLWOOD, one of the assistant treasurers at Motor Square Garden, is a veteran theatrical man. Many a town John has trouped with various kinds of shows. At one time he was connected with the old Bijou Theater here when that house was the capital of melodrama in the town. John still has a ringing in his ears coming from the incessant clatter of the galleries as they cheered the United States Marines who always landed on the job to save the young American hero and his gal from as bloodthirsty a crew of Central American bandits as you'd care to look at. John recalls the old custom of the members of the cast taking bows after the acts. They not only took bows, but they walked across the stage. In taking his bow, the villian seldom stepped out of character. He followed close on the heels of the white-shirted hero and where the hero strutted and held forth a friendly hand to his frinds in the gallery, the villian was a slinking brute who snarled through a black mustache as the enraged gallery hissed and hooted. Ah, those were the days.

John Fullwood still mourns the fine scheme he had to obtain publicity for his troupe, then in Erie. He concocted the idea of faking a suicide attempt by the soubrette. Cooler heads, however, prevailed, and the scheme was dropped. But not before the reporters had heard how John had planned a fake. A few days later the soubrette actually did draw a knife across her velvet throat and when John called up the paper boys they just laughed. You couldn't fool them. The soubrette did not die, fortunately, but to this day, John Fullwood, with the instincts of the old show man, still mourns the fact that the soubrette never got the right sort of recognition for a very honest and conscientious attempt to die.

EDITORS blow hot and cold very easily. Great enthusiasm will be followed by frigidity. Who can forget the reply of a New York editor to Mr. McQuiston after Mr. McQuiston had wired from Pittsburgh: "Fred Clarke seriously ill. Can give you 1,500 words." The reply read: "If he dies, send us 50."

Can a pedestrian cross a street against a red traffic light? Harry Mellon, one of the town's best traffic officers, says there is no law to restrict the pedestrian. Nevertheless the other day a young gentleman of the press walked across the street against a red light and a sub-policeman who was serving his first day at that post clapped the handcuffs on the young gentleman of the press and ushered him into the hoosegow. In fairness to the new policeman it must be stated that the young gentleman of the press probably had a few words over the point of law involved, and his brief, unlike the bound articles one must present in the Supreme Court, was just sort of impromptu, all of which doubtless caused the policeman to assert his authority.

TERRY DIES AT HOME IN KENT

SMALL HYTHE, Kent, July 21.—(AP.)—Dame Ellen Terry, British actress, beloved by playgoers the world over, died this morning in the little oaken farmhouse tucked away in the vales of Kent, where she had quietly spent the last years of her life.

Death came at 8:56 a. m., after an uncomfortable night, during which she sank slowly to the end. When dawn appeared the doctor announced the patient was considerably weaker. She passed away peacefully, surrounded by her children and grandchildren. Her death marked the final period of her hopeless struggle against a combination heart attack and cerebral hemorrhage, from which she had been sinking slowly since Tuesday.

A few days ago, with the end approaching, she gave the Associated Press this message for America:

"Give my love to America, and tell my dear friends there that I am thinking of them as I rest in my quiet English countryside. When one is 80, one has dreams of days gone by and often in my dreams I live again the many happy times I spent in America. My heart is warm with the memories of my friends across the sea."

The whole world which loves such consummate art a that with which Ellen Terry charmed and thrilled lovers of the drama for more than half a century, was plunged into mourning by the news that the final curtain had been rung down on her great career.

There had been fears for some time that she, whose life was the stage, would not much longer survive the definite withdrawal from it which her age compelled. She celebrated her eightieth birthday last February.

She was prevented by illness at that time from replying as she had planned to the message broadcast in her honor over the radio by Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson.

She recovered from this illness quite quickly, however, and except for feebleness and infirmities incident to age and some degree of recession in mental activities, she had appeared as well as could be expected until her seizure on July 27.

To the last, Dame Ellen had followed the affairs of the stage with the greatest interest. She played her last Shakespearean part as Portia in the trial scene from "The Merchant of Venice" in 1921. Her last stage part, a non-speaking role, was that of the ghost of a kindly mother in Walter De la Mare's "Crossings," when she was 77, after she had gone more or less into retirement in the country, of which she was passionately fond.

Her summers were spent quietly at her charming cottage in Kent. In winter, until last year, she came up to her London flat in the heart of the land of the theater, and saw as many plays as she had strength for.

Until two years ago, Miss Terry never failed to appear at first nights in London, and the tall, queenly old lady in black, with a black lace scarf draped over her silver hair, was always rapturously applauded when she entered her box.

SKYWARD

by Commander Richard E. Byrd

Weather Conditions Very Favorable on Byrd's Dash to North Pole

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd first trained for a seafaring profession, but later became interested in aviation. He has described the dangers of pioneer flying and the crash of the America. During the war he established an air unit at Halifax, N. S. He advocated the creation of a Bureau of Aeronautics in the Navy Department. He described the adventurous flights of the first aviators to cross the Atlantic Ocean. Due to missing a train he failed to make the fatal test flight on the ZR-2. He told of the adventures of his first flight to the North Polar regions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Byrd Acts as Relief Pilot

CHAPTER XX.

WITH a total load of nearly 10,000 pounds we raced down the runway. The rough snow ahead loomed dangerously near, but we never reached it. We were off for our great adventure!

We had a short-wave radio set operated by a hand dynamo, should we be forced down on the ice. A hand-made sledge presented to us by Amundsen was stowed in the fuselage, on which to carry our food and clothing should we be compelled to walk to Greenland. We had food for 10 weeks.

Our main staple, pemmican, consisting of chopped-up dried meat, fat, sugar and raisins, was supplemented by chocolate, pilot-bread, tea, malted milk, powdered chocolate, butter, sugar and cream cheese, all of which form a highly concentrated diet.

Other articles of equipment were a rubber boat for crossing open leads, if forced down, reindeer-skin, polar bear and seal fur clothes, boots and gloves, primus stove, rifle, pistol, shotgun and ammunition; tent, knives, ax, medical kit and smoke bombs—all as compact as humanly possible.

Magnificent Views

The first stage of our navigation was the simple one of dead reckoning, or following the well-known landmarks in the vicinity of Kings Bay, which we had just left. We climbed to 2,000 feet to get a good view of the coast and the magnificent snow-covered mountains inland. Within an hour of taking the air we passed the rugged and glacier-laden land and crossed the edge of the polar ice pack. It was much nearer to the land than we had expected. Over to the east was a point where the ice field was very near the land.

We looked ahead at the sea ice gleaming in the rays of the midnight sun—a fascinating scene whose lure had drawn famous men into its clutches, never to return. It was with a feeling of exhilaration that we felt that for the first time in history two mites of men could gaze upon its charms, and discover its secrets, out of reach of these sharp claws.

It was only natural for Bennett and me to wonder whether or not we would ever get back to this small island we were leaving, for all the airmen explorers who had preceded us in attempts to reach the Pole by aviation had met with disaster or near disaster.

Though it was important to hit the Pole from the standpoint of achievement, it was more important to do so from that of our lives, so that we could get back to Spitzbergen, a target none too big. We could not fly back to land from an unknown position. We must put every possible second of time and our best concentration on the job of navigating and of flying a straight course—our very lives depended on it.

Locating Position Difficult

As there are no landmarks on the ice, Polar Sea navigation by aircraft is similar to that on the ocean, where there is nothing but sun and stars and moon from which to determine one's position. The altitude above the sea horizon of one of these celestial bodies is taken with the sextant. Then, by mathematical calculations, requiring an hour or so to work out, the ship is located somewhere on an imaginary line. The polar Sea horizon, however, cannot always be depended upon; due to roughness of the ice. Therefore we had a specially designed instrument that we had developed for the 1919 trans-Atlantic flight.

Again, should the navigator of a fast airplane take an hour to get his line of position, by the time he plotted it on his chart he would be a hundred miles or so away from the point at which he took the sight. He must, therefore, have quick means of making the astronomical calculation.

We were familiar with one means of calculation which takes advantage of some interesting astronomical conditions existing at the North Pole. It is a graphical method that does away largely with mathematical calculations, so that the entire operation of taking the altitude of the sun and laying down the line of position could be done in a very few minutes.

Depend Upon Sun Compass

This method was taught me by G. W. Littlebales, of the Navy Hydrographic Office and was first discovered by Arthur Hinks, of the Royal Geographic Society.

So much for the locating of position in the Polar Sea by astronomy, which must be done by the navigator to check up and correct the course steered by the pilot. The compass is generally off the true course a greater or less degree, on account of faulty steering, currents, wind, etc.

Our chief concern was to steer as nearly due north as possible. This could not be done with the ordinarily dependable magnetic compass, which points only in the general direction of the North Magnetic Pole, lying on Boothia Peninsula, Canada, more than a thousand miles south of the North Geographical Pole.

If the compass pointed exactly toward the Magnetic Pole the magnetic bearing of the North Geographical Pole could be calculated mathematically for any place on the Polar Sea. But as there is generally some local condition affecting the needle, the variation of the compass from true north can be found only by actual trial.

Since this trial could not have been made over unknown regions, the true directions the compass needle would point along our route were not known. Also, since the directive force of the earth's magnetism is small in the Far North, there is a tendency of the needle toward sluggishness in indicating a change in direction of the plane, and toward undue swinging after it has once started to move.

Nor would the famous gyroscopic compass work up there, as when nearing the pole its axis would have a tendency to point straight up in the air.

There was only one thing to do—to depend upon the sun. For this we used a sun-compass. The same type instrument that had been invented and constructed for our 1925 expedition by Albert H. Brumstead, chief cartographer of the National Geographical Society. I do not hesitate to say that without it we could not have reached the pole; it is even doubtful if we could have hit Spitzbergen on our return flight.

Drift-Indicator Used

Of course, the sun was necessary for the use of this compass. Its principle is a kind of a reversal of that of the sundial. In the latter, the direction of the north is known and the shadow of the sun gives the time of day. With the sun-compass, the time of day is known, and the shadow of the sun, when it bisects the hand of the 24-hour clock, indicates the direction after the instrument has been set.

Then there was the influence of the wind that had to be allowed for. An airplane, in effect, is a part of the wind, just as a ship in a current floats with the speed of the current. If, for example, a 30-mile-an-hour wind is blowing at right angles to the course, the plane will be taken 30 miles an hour to one side of its course. This is called "drift" and can be compensated for by an instrument called the drift-indicator, which we had also developed for the first trans-Atlantic flight.

We used the drift-indicator through the trapdoor in the plane, and had so arranged the cabin that

FIND POET IN GIRL'S DEATH

(Copyright by International News Service)

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., July 21.—Maxwell Bodenheim, poet and novelist, friend of Miss Virginia Drew, young artist and authoress, whose body was found in the Hudson River, was located here today in the artists' colony. Miss Drew was last seen alive leaving the apartment of Mr. Bodenheim, who subsequently disappeared.

Mr. Bodenheim frankly admitted that he went away from New York to avoid "unpleasant publicity."

He declared that he argued with Miss Drew until 3 o'clock in the morning of the day she left his New York apartment, trying to dissuade her from taking her life.

TALKED OF DEATH PACT

Disappointment over her failure to write acceptable verse, coupled with reveries over the mystery of reincarnation, was discovered to have figured in the case, and then it was learned that the girl had talked of a suicide pact with a novelist friend.

Bodenheim, known in New York's Greenwich Village as the "Bohemian of Bohemians," was found in his cottage here, "The Peggy."

"Yes, she was at my apartment Sunday night," he said.

"She's the last person I'll ever befriend, too. I left New York to get away from any publicity in this connection and never thought you'd find me here. Still there's nothing to hide, only it's mighty unpleasant.

"Two or three weeks ago I first heard of Virginia Drew. I got a letter from her in which she asked me to look over some verses she had written. She wanted to know frankly if they were good or bad.

"She gave me her telephone number in the letter and I called her up. She begged to be allowed to call at my apartment, bringing the verses. So she came. They were not a bit artistic and I was forced to tell her so. She asked for frankness.

"She left very much disappointed. Then last Sunday night she appeared again. She burst into my apartment, saying, in a most matter of fact tone, that she was going to kill herself because of her disappointment over my criticism of the verses and her home conditions.

"'I'm not going to carry on any longer,' was what she said. I argued with her until I was black in the face, trying to persuade her it was better to carry on, that she could give up verse and devote her talents to music, painting or something else artistic.

ARGUES TILL 3 A. M.

"Why, I argued with her from 8 in the evening until 3 in the morning trying to talk her out of suicide, and I thought I succeeded. When she left, I walked with her along Forty-fifth street, New York, and finally got her promise to go on living and make the best of things. I thought she went to a train.

"I went back to the hotel where my apartment is. The next day the clerk told me a man had called, flashed a badge of the secret service, said he was a brother of Miss Drew and hinted at suicide.

"I packed up and got out of town to avoid publicity. I had nothing to do with her death. Unfortunately she took my criticism to heart. She's the last I'll ever befriend."

Student Suicide Laid to 'Date' Failure

DENVER, July 21. — (AP.) — Charles Horn, 15, a summer student at East Denver High School, shot and killed himself yesterday on the esplanade in front of the school.

Student friends of the youth advanced the theory that Horn took his life because he had been refused a "date" by a girl student at the high school.

TOLEDO, O., July 21.

That Lawn Tennis Association didn't monkey with Tilden long when they saw he couldn't win, did they?

The rules say, "You can write articles but not on the same day you play." They figure it's too hard on an amateur to write and play the same day. It takes a professional to have that much endurance.

Outside the Maryland Racing Association, who barred Harry Sinclair's horses for running on an oiled track, I don't suppose there is any body of men in America that are as consistently humorous as these amateur associations.

Detectives Seek to Solve Murder of Roger Ackroyd. Can You?

Thomas Malone, Lieutenant of City Detectives says:

"I hope to read 'The Murder of Roger Ackroyd,' Sunday—for that's the only day I get a chance to read much, besides reports on murders and other crimes that our department investigates. I hope everyone in the town will read the novel—it's great."

David Corbett, Chief of Homicide Squad, City Detective Bureau, says:

"'The Murder of Roger Ackroyd' is a thrilling story, and real enough. It has had some counterparts in real life. Having nine persons suspected reminds me of the time two of our detectives arrested a whole town—70 people—whom they suspected. They found the right man, too. Surely, I recommend the story. It's great."

Peter P. Walsh, Superintendent of Pittsburgh Police, says:

"I like murder mystery stories, and I think they are, as a whole, to be recommended to others to read. Somehow, they stimulate thinking and analyzing. I'm certainly going to read 'The Murder of Roger Ackroyd,' for it has the reputation of being a fine story."

Michael Feeney, Chief, Missing Persons Bureau, says:

"I know the story and it's very interesting. It reminded me of the murder of Albert Couch—so many clues left behind and so few recognizable that it was difficult of solution."

[Mr. Feeney was one of the detectives who solved the murder of Couch, whose slayer, Joe Valotta, is now serving a life term.]

Coal Rate From Pgh. Slashed

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The Interstate Commerce Commission ruled today that rates on bituminous coal from the Reynoldsville, Pittsburgh and Connellsville districts of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio to East Rochester, N. Y., were "unreasonable and unduly prejudicial."

The commission ordered a freight rate reduction of about 10 cents per ton on this coal traffic effective October 1.

Two Stolen Idols

By FRANK L. PACKARD

The Death of Mindar Singh And the Return of Captain Scarface

HE STOPPED rowing suddenly as the sound of something metallic falling on the bottom of the boat caught his ear—and, as suddenly, he leaned forward toward Mindar Singh. The revolver had dropped from the man's hand; and Mindar Singh's head was drooping limply on his breast. Bob Kingsley bent over the man. The end had come, too, for Mindar Singh. Mindar Singh was dead.

Bob Kingsley went back to his oars, but he leaned upon them silently now, and did not row. Verna was undoubtedly asleep, for she had noticed nothing. There was no good in telling her now. Heaven knew she had had enough.

How still it was! He rested his head upon his hands. How much farther was it to the shore? He was a bit done in. The last four days and nights had taken something out of him. A ten minutes' spell of rest now would—

His head came up suddenly, and he listened intently. Out of the silence there came a splash of oars, the sound of voices—and the sounds came from the direction of the shore. Scarface! It must be Scarface! Luala, so far as he knew, was not inhabited. Scarface had seen the burning schooner and was rowing out to her. The shore couldn't be so far away, then, as it had seemed from the schooner's deck. If he had been rowing an hour, and Scarface had been rowing an hour—that was two hours—say, eight or nine miles.

He stood up in the boat and shouted at the top of his voice:

"Scarface! Scarface!"

A booming voice came back:

"Aye! Who's that? Ahoy, there! Ahoy!"

And now Verna, too, was on her feet, and clinging to Bob Kingsley's arms.

"What is it? What is it?" she cried eagerly.

"It's Capt. Scarface!" he answered buoyantly. "Keep on calling, or we'll miss each other in the darkness."

The boats drew closer and closer together. And now Bob Kingsley could see that there were two boats, not one, coming toward him. A moment later they were alongside.

"Yes, Black Bob it is!" Scarface roared out, as though defying his own amazement. "My word! And little Miss Lyle, too! And—my God!—what's this?"

Scarface's position in his own boat had swung him abreast of Mindar Singh.

Bob Kingsley stepped quickly to the after thwart.

"Keep quiet!" he said in a lowered voice. "It's Mindar Singh. He's dead. There's no reason for her to know now."

"O, right-o!" Capt. Scarface gulped in shocked bewilderment. "How'd you get here? Where'd you come from? Not from that vessel afire out there, was it? We saw her blaze, and started out to see if we could be of any help."

"Yes, that's were we came from." Bob Kingsley answered, and quickly, briefly, sketched the story of what had happened since Capt. Scarface had sailed from Singaport. "And," he ended, "I don't think there's any use going out to the schooner now, except to satisfy yourself there's nothing that could have been done. Anyway"—he indicated Mindar Singh's body with a slight movement of his head—"take us into your boat and put some of your men in here. You understand? Then the other two boats can go on out there, if you like, while you take us ashore in yours."

"Right!" agreed Capt. Scarface promptly.

Bob Kingsley turned to Verna.

"We're going ashore in Capt. Scarface's boat," he explained. "Some of his men are going to take this one and continue on out to the schooner."

She nodded her head. She seemed very tired, very weary. She stumbled a little as Bob Kingsley half led, half lifted her into the other boat, and seated himself beside her facing Capt. Scarface in the stern sheets.

The boats separated.

"'Tain't much use sending 'em, I suppose!" Capt. Scarface grunted; "but I'll feel the better for it. Eh?"

"Yes," said Bob Kingsley.

"And now," said Capt. Scarface, "you having spun your yarn, I'll spin mine—and I've got some yarn to spin! I made Luala in better'n four days, and found the creek all right. And so up it we goes—Marlow and me and a boat's crew. And there was the crumbled hillside, and the burnt tree! Say, the scent was getting hot then! Due west by compass 50 paces, you said. I paced 'em, and I came to a rock flattern' a pancake, and bigger around than a full moon. And under which there was a hole, d'ye see? A hole just big enough so's you could crawl in beneath the rock. This was at the foot of that hillside, you understand, and what had happened was that there'd been a landslide that had carried away a cave that had been in the face of the hill. Boy"—Capt. Scarface's voice was rising in his excitement—"what we found ain't nothing to what's left! It'll take a week to dig in under all those slithered rocks and the ton or two of earth which is what the cave is at the present writing. But first off, we fished out an iron box the size of a sailor's chest that's worth a king's ransom alone, and what with its gold, and jewels, and ornaments, and diamonds that weren't set, and—"

Capt. Scarface came to a stunned and abrupt pause. He became aware for the first time that his audience was not at the moment interested in any such sort of treasure as the one he had been describing. Verna's head was on Bob Kingsley's shoulder. Bob Kingsley was whispering to her. Neither of them was paying the slightest attention to him.

Capt. Scarface cleared his throat.

"I'm damned!" he said.

THE END.

Horoscopes

Sunday, July 22

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds portent of unforeseen and disruptive conditions that may end in sudden removals or travel. These should be undertaken with caution, and avenues for misrepresentation, fraud and deception guarded against, especially through writings. Social, domestic and affectional affairs are pleasant, however.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of sudden fortunes, with change, removal or journeys not entirely satisfactory.

A child born on this day may have erratic and unsettled tendencies inciting it to sudden changes and adventures, but withal it should have many pleasant personal traits and experiences.

Monday, July 23

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a routine day, with the usual run of affairs moving, but progressively, in accustomed grooves. Labor, diligence and application will make for future substantial returns, but be on guard against small anxieties and deceptions.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a rather routine year, with things slowly moving forward, with promise of due reward for diligence and perseverance. Small anxieties and deceptions should be vanquished.

A child born on this day should be industrious and steadfast, but may be inclined to worry over trifles and to itself indulge in small subtleties.

YOUTH and Beauty were playing cards. It started out as a mild, unexciting game just to pass the time pleasantly. But with each new hand the game became more interesting and more absorbing. Sometimes She held the winning hand; at other times He came out the winner. Still they played on and their excitement rose to dizzy heights.

Although these two thought themselves alone, an interested spectator hovered closely over them. Love, the invisible third party, was as enthusiastically absorbed as the players. At last Youth held a winning hand and anxiously awaited the countermove of Beauty. She, however, was uncertain as to her play, but Love showed her the way.

MAN'S DOUBLE NATURE

CONSIDER, my Daughter, the double nature of Man.

HELEN ROWLAND

He saith in his heart, "I admire only a Perfect Lady;" yet he pursueth the flamboyant flapper and playeth around with the roughnecks and wild women.

He dodgeth the woman whom he loveth, lest his heart become entangled—and backeth into the arms of the woman whom he doth NOT love, and is entangled before he suspects it.

He saith, "Flirtation and petting are vain, and I am bored beyond words with women!" Yet upon the morrow, he calleth up the pink and yellow blonde, and goeth back to the old game, for distraction.

He yearneth always to do big and magnificent things—but wasteth all his days doing foolish and trivial things.

He saith, "Tomorrow, I shall rise at dawn and WORK until sundown, and naught upon the earth nor in the heavens above the earth shall stop me!"

And behold, upon the morrow, the dawn cometh and goeth, and the afternoon findeth him upon the golf links.

He resolveth, each day, to be calm and serene and unmoved by trifles. Yet, alas, when his stenographer arriveth 10 minutes late, she findeth him pacing the office in a brainstorm. And when his wife summoneth him upon the telephone, while he is in conference, she is met with a tempest of reproach.

He saith, "Today will I go upon a reducing diet!" And at breakfast he scorneth the tempting bacon and the innocent muffin. Yet, at high noon, he cryeth, "I am hungry as a wolf! I can no longer endure this strain." And his order is roast beef and potatoes and rice pudding!

Now, then, shall any woman understand the man whom she loveth?

For today, yesterday and forever he is animated by his higher aspirations and his finer ideals. But all the days of his life he is ruled by his little weaknesses and LED by his impulses!

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Mrs. Ticer Believes Eleanor Is in Grave Danger

MRS. TICER folded her hands in her ample lap and rocked for several seconds before explaining what she meant by her cryptic wish that she hoped Eleanor Lincoln would be alive at the time the book with Dicky's illustrations made from sketches of the girl should be published. There was something ludicrous in her deliberation, but there was something compelling about it also, and I knew that though she had all the country-woman's penchant for exaggeration, she also possessed an endowment of good sense and a faculty of keen observation which I had utilized on more than one occasion. Therefore I waited tensely, eagerly, for her explanation.

"I mean," she said at last, "that there's something very queer about that girl and that man and woman she calls her uncle and aunt."

She paused and looked at me significantly, and I recalled a fleeting doubt I had had of the relationship which the beautiful young chatelaine of The Larches proclaimed between herself, the last word in exquisite, carefully-reared girlhood, and the uncouth old man and shadowy invalid whom she called her "Uncle Henry" and "Aunt Anna."

"You do not think they are related to her?" I asked.

"Well; if I'm her grandmother and Jerry's her twin brother, then those two are her relations," my neighbor declared with emphasis. "Now, mind you, I don't believe there's a mite of harm in that girl. Her and me don't always get along as well as we might—I can't cotton to those uppity ways she falls in now and then, but you can't help liking her. I haven't any patience with the theory that Katie of yours has. She says Miss Lincoln is the leader of a band of crooks and that we all shall be murdered in our beds."

I laughed, but with the mental reservation to curb my little maid's lively tongue the next opportunity I had to tax her with her volubility.

"Oh, Katie!" I said with carefully assumed carelessness. "You know she turns everything into a movie."

"Yes, and she sure will get her come uppance some day with that nonsense," Mrs. Ticer prophesied darkly. "But, as I was saying, I don't believe there's any harm in Miss Lincoln, but I do believe she's in danger of some kind, and that she knows it. Say! didn't an owl scare her nearly to death at your house that night at dinner?"

I gave a dismayed start. Katie must have been talking. Mrs. Ticer eyed me shrewdly.

"Yes, I heard it from Katie," she said, "but I'll give the girl credit, she didn't mean to let it out. She was talking to Jerry one day, and he was telling her about an owl he'd shot, and she squealed: 'Oh, I wonder if that's the one what scared Miss Lincoln so the night of the party—' I can't say it the way she does, but you know the way she talks."

I nodded, impatient of anything which should delay her absorbing story.

"Then she shut up like a clam—and asked Jerry to forget she'd said anything. Of course Jerry forgot just as long as it took him to get home to me, but I made sure that he repeated it to no one else. I made up my mind I'd ask you about it, though, just as soon as I saw you. I ain't asking because I'm curious. I've got a good reason for wanting to know."

Aching Feet Cause Sour Dispositions

DR. COPELAND

YOU may go for a physical examination and be pronounced absolutely sound by the doctor. He may find every organ perfect. There may not be a blemish on your person. Yet in reality you may be disabled.

It all depends on your feet. If your shoes are not comfortable you cannot be a normal person. Aching feet are among the real ailments of modern life. For disquieting effects they equal many diseases.

Every person knows how uncomfortable a stiff derby hat feels when it is placed on the head for the first time. To make it fit it is necessary to take the shape of the head with a hat form, heat the hat and shape it to the conformation of your skull.

What a lot of trouble to take to get the right shape to your derby. You are not satisfied merely to buy a seven and one-half size. You insist that it shall be shaped to fit your particular head.

Why don't you take the same pains with your shoes?

If you ever get a chance to look at your feet through an X-ray machine, do it by all means. You will be shocked to see how your toes are cramped and doubled and out of shape.

Nobody wants big shoes. Every man who wears a seven and one-half hat is proud of the size of his head. But if he wears number eleven shoes, he is ashamed of his feet. Why do we go to such contraries?

I know a man whose shoes always remind me of mud-turtles. They are just about that shape. But he is a sensible man. It is probable he knows his feet are homely things, but he has too much sense to thrust his badly formed feet into shoes of classical shape.

I saw a Senator the other day who had on shoes which would create a smile on Broadway, but they were so comfortable the Senator carried a face wreathed in smiles. I have seen many a pretty face on Broadway wearing a pained expression such as aching feet alone could call into existence.

You cannot be well or happy if your feet hurt. Many a nervous woman is nervous because she wears the wrong shoes. God bless her! She knows what is wrong. But she won't fly in the face of fashion, so she stumps along on feet of lead.

Many an aching back and many lame limbs, many an attack of muscular cramps, many miserable days and sleepless nights are due to the wearing of wrong shoes.

Think it over! Is it worth while to sacrifice the quality of your service and the poise you might possess, for the sake of wearing a style of shoe which was never made for you?

Your health depends on freedom from unnecessary aches and pains. You cannot afford to exhaust your reserve stock of nerve energy. That is what you do when you have badly fitting shoes.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Waiting Impatiently

DEAR MISS GALE:

I don't know what to do, so I have come to you with my problem. I take music lessons from a new teacher. He is 29, going on 30. He is married and has two children. Every time I go there he is too familiar with me. The last time he grabbed and kissed me. I told him I wouldn't come for lessons any more. The next time I had to go for lessons, I told mother I didn't want to go. Now if I don't go mother will want to know why, so I didn't tell her but went. When I got there he thought I was fooling, because I said I wouldn't come, and then did. His wife's the most darling woman I know. Now shall I tell mother? If I don't I'll have to keep going to lessons. I am 15 years old, am not bad looking, but I am delicate, so when he kissed me again, I punch, kick and smack him, but it doesn't hurt. Miss Gale, please answer soon because I will have to keep going to lessons. I don't want to tell his wife for she's too nice. I will keep on waiting,

IMPATIENTLY.

Why should you hesitate for a second to tell your mother, my dear? This man is a cad, and you should certainly never go to his studio again. Tell your mother all about it at once.

Puzzled

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am in my late teens and have written to you for advice. I am a constant reader of the lovelorn column and find it interesting. Miss Gale, I go with a girl friend of mine who went steady with a boy whom I liked very much. They never got along very well, although they have been going together for more than a year. When they broke up, he wanted me to go out with him. Is it proper to go out with him, since everyone knows that they have been going together? Wouldn't it look like through her I was trying to get him? I am a very good friend to both of them. Thanking you, I remain, PUZZLED.

If their friendship is definitely broken, I see no reason why you shouldn't go out with the boy. But be sure that he isn't trying to make the other girl jealous.

Buddie

DEAR MISS GALE:

Please help me to solve a problem. I am a girl 19 years old and have been going with a fellow for eight months. He is 22 and married. That, Miss Gale, is where my problem is. He was married when he was 19 and his wife 24. He didn't love her, he married her out of sympathy which he mistook for love. A week after the marriage he realized his mistake, but did not tell her. In a few months she started to run around with other men and girls who didn't have a good reputation. He told her he would leave her if she didn't behave, so she got mad, packed up and left him. They were separated for two years in which time neither applied for a divorce. Then I met him in the fall of last year, and we fell in love. He told me the first week I met him that he was married, but he would get a divorce if I would marry him when he was free. And I told him I would. He filed an application for a divorce and we went together and were supremely happy when my mother decided I couldn't see him until he was absolutely free. And even then she doesn't want me to marry him or even speak to him. All my friends tell me that I won't be happy with a divorced man. But, Miss Gale, if we love each other we can be happy. I agree with you on the smoking, drinking and petting question. If you don't mind, Miss Gale, I would like to hear from some of your readers on this question. Wishing you lots of success, I am,

BUDDIE.

Of course you are very young to be thinking of marriage at all, you know, so why not do as your mother suggests until the man is free to marry you. I cannot see why you and he should both pay for a mistake he made once, and if you really love each other I am sure you could be happy together. But give yourself plenty of time to be sure.

Undecided

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a faithful reader of your column. This is my trouble. I am 18, rather good-looking and popular with the opposite sex. Right near where I live is a young fellow aged 20. He is an Italian by birth and the opposite religion to what I am. When I was just a little girl in grade school I used to play with him. But when he went to high school we never saw much of each other. I went to the high school in this town while he went to one supported by his church. He called me up one night and asked to take me to a dance that the college he went to was giving. It happened that I had another date for that evening of the dance and so had to refuse. He has called me many times asking me to dances, shows, etc. But, Miss Gale, I am undecided whether or not I should go. You cannot tell by looking at him that he is not an American, but I feel as though I would be lowering myself. Remember, Miss Gale, that his people are not just common ditch-diggers, but pretty wealthy. Please advise me whether I should go out with him or not. I agree with you on the smoking, petting and drinking subjects. Hoping I see this in print soon, I remain

UNDECIDED.

I can't see how you would be lowering yourself in any way, my dear. If you like him I see no reason why you shouldn't be friends. Differences in religion and nationality become problems only when the question of marriage arises.

J. R.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of the Lovelorn and I think your advice is just wonderful, so I have come for some myself. Miss Gale, this is my problem: I am a girl, 19 years old, and am in love with a boy who I know loves me. But, Miss Gale, I found out that this certain boy is 10 months younger than me, and I told him about it, Miss Gale, but he said not to let that bother me. He has asked me to marry him. Now, Miss Gale, should I give him up on account of the age and be friends with him, or doesn't the difference in age matter? Now, Miss Gale, please give me some advice. Thanking you for your wonderful advice, I remain, J. R.

You are both too young to be thinking of marriage, so keep the boy as a friend, my dear. Ten months' difference is not a great deal, but at his present age he is too young to know his own mind.

Forbes

Brokers' Offices Deserted; Bulls Still Bullish, but—

By B. C. FORBES

PRESIDENTIAL straw votes interest business men. It is too early to know definitely how the wind will blow. The most important straw vote recorded thus far is that being taken daily by the Hearst newspapers throughout the country. The result shows Smith far in the lead.

A Tampa newspaper's straw vote gives Smith not quite a two-for-one vote. The most interesting fact revealed, however, is that far more Democrats than Republicans are voting for Hoover, whereas only a few Republicans declare their intention of voting for Governor Smith.

In Wall Street the betting at the moment strongly favors Hoover.

WALL STREET'S powerful bulls are still in the ring. They express determination to keep stocks up regardless of how the Federal Reserve authorities may act. They claim that the dear money in Wall Street has been brought about largely by artificial means and that there is more than enough money in the country to go round at rates attractive to borrowers.

Meanwhile those who still favor the up-side can point to quarterly and half-yearly statements showing increases in earnings in a majority of instances—though not, of course, all. And it must be admitted that many of the showings are unexpectedly good, for there have been many complaints about quiet business.

The writer, however, still feels that there are forces at work calculated to bring about lower quotations for most of the speculative stocks which have been aggressively marked up. The weakness in bonds and the existence of considerable undigested securities should not be ignored.

A BUSINESS man who has been traveling in New England writes that he found the situation in New Bedford very serious as a consequence of the three months' strike of textile workers. When he asked a leading local banker why the mills, instead of trying to cut wages 10 per cent didn't follow Ford's example of reducing costs by increasing production, the reply he got was:

"The workers won't let the mill men do this. The mill owners simply must win this fight, for, if they don't, the Communists who are openly working here will carry their activities on throughout New England—and, after that, doubtless elsewhere."

The American public have learned very little about the true inwardness of this strike. If the mill owners are confident they are in the right, they certainly should take steps calculated to have unbiased investigation made and the findings laid before the nation.

Wage-cutting has become extremely unpopular with the American people. The onus of defending it lies with those who attempt to enforce it.

HIDING your light under a bushel is out of date. Mississippi's leading citizens have organized goodwill and educational tours—whole train loads of Mississippians and exhibits—for the double purpose of, first, showing and telling the whole country what the state has done and is doing and expects to do for improvement and betterment and what opportunities and resources are offered the investor and desirable home seeker; and, second, bringing Mississippians into personal contact with the people of other states to learn what they are doing to develop their economic and civic opportunities.

Walter Parker, economist of Fenner & Beane, of New Orleans, declares that "the one-crop cotton farmer no longer has standing." Not only is Mississippi developing agriculturally and industrially, but along its gulf shore there has sprung up a most attractive Riviera. New Orleans itself is in certain respects the most picturesque and interesting of all American cities.

THE intense heat and the setback in quotations have almost emptied the customers' rooms of brokerage houses in New York. When the market was going up and up, not only was every seat occupied, but the standees suggested a subway crowd at the height of the rush hour. Then there was a continuous buzz of conversation. Now all is calm and quiet.

STOCK EXCHANGE firm has made this interesting discovery: The most desirable class of customers do not like to step into a main office or a branch office located on the ground floor of a busy street, but prefer to patronize a less public place. "Some of our better-grade customers didn't like running into their own workers when they stepped out at lunchtime to have a look at the blackboard," a member of the firm explained. "They did not run into their own employes or into other odd-lot dabblers in stocks when they chose a branch office located upstairs."

AFTER very grave doubts had been entertained, the indications now are that the Chrysler-Dodge deal will go through. If it does, it should make a very strong combination. Dodge dealers are famous for their efficiency.

STOCKS LACK DEFINITE TREND

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Extreme dullness characterized today's brief session of the stock market. Price movements again were indecisive, due to the failure of pools to attract an outside following and the absence of any concerted selling pressure.

The optimistic tenor of weekly trade reviews were offset by fears of further credit stringency when the remaining Federal Reserve banks raise their rediscount rates to 5 per cent, and banks are called upon to finance the fall movement of crops.

Resumption of bullish operations in Warner Brothers Pictures carried that stock to a new high of 57½, which contrasted with the year's low of 22. A good demand also was noticed for such issues as Lehn & Fink, Eastman Kodak, Columbia Gas, Lambert, Kroger Stores, International Telephone and Mexican Seaboard.

Profit-taking brought about substantial reductions in such recent favorites as Union Carbide, Radio, Montgomery Ward and General Motors.

The closing was irregular. Total sales were approximately 520,000 shares.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 21.—The cotton market opened easy today at a decline of 4 to 10 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables and reports of showers or rains in the Southwest.

Initial offerings were well taken by week-end covering and overnight buying orders, but this demand was soon supplied, October contracts selling off to 20.72c, and the general list showing net declines of 14 to 16 points before the end of the first hour.

Private cables said there had been heavy selling in Liverpool, especially by Bombay, on reports of favorable weather in the South.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 68,533 bales, against 56,405 last year.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, July 21.—Selling ascribed to the Northwest, together with weakness of Winnipeg quotations, led early today to a downward swing of wheat values here. Spring wheat crop advices continued favorable, and there were again big receipts at winter wheat centers. Opening ⅜ to ½c off Chicago wheat subsequently showed a material further setback. Corn also developed weakness, starting ¼c down to ¼c up, and then undergoing a general drop. Oats were relatively firm. Provisions tended to sag.

CONNELLSVILLE MAN, HURT IN CRASH, DIES

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., July 21.—Injuries received two months ago when an automobile, in which he was riding, crashed into a telegraph pole at Poplar Grove caused the death yesterday of George Filer, 48. His jaw was broken and he suffered internal injuries, which resulted in a stroke of paralysis.

PRICE CHANGES ARE NARROW

A narrow, quiet trading session marked the week-end dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. The market here reflected the dullness in New York, where even the speculative leaders appeared to have dried up.

Scattered odd-lot sales were recorded on the local board, but price changes were extremely small. The opening was very dull and after a few trades at prices about equal to last night's closings, the market simply stopped for more than an hour. Toward the close there was a little week-end evening up, but it was of such small importance as regards volume that the price list as established in the initial trading was practically unchanged.

Consolidated Ice preferred made its appearance on the board again at 27, the price at which it sold near the end of last week, when it moved up from 26 to 27 on a turnover of less than 100 shares. An odd lot of Pittsburgh Brewing common sold at 4¾, unchanged from the previous price.

The fuel group was dull, but steady. Carnegie Metals was handled at 18¾, up a small fraction from the previous recorded sale and National Fireproofing preferred changed hands at 18, the price around which it has been hovering most of the month.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Prices held fairly steady in a dull bond market today. Trading was light and interest lacking.

Industrials again failed to attract attention, while rails were inclined to heaviness. Utilities were firmer than in several days. The foreign list was steady.

U. S. Government Bonds showed some softness, with Libertys seeking lower levels.

NEW YORK, July 21.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

TWO DIE, 50 ILL OF POISON FOOD

CROWELL, Tex., July 21.—(AP.)—As a result of eating poisoned beans Wednesday, J. B. Lassater, farmer, and his 5-year-old daughter, Mary, are dead, and five other members of the family were seriously ill today. A 2-year-old baby, who went to bed without supper, was the only member of the family to escape. County officials said examination showed the beans had developed poison after canning.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—(AP.)—Approximately 50 women and children taken to hospitals here last night, are suffering from what was diagnosed as food poisoning, following a picnic at Marshall Hall, Md., an amusement resort.

Many others, less seriously ill, were being treated at their homes.

Doctors attributed the illness to "bad eggs." Both the police department and district health office have ordered an investigation.

The outing was given by the Central Union Mission. Baskets for the 700 women and children were prepared at the Mission and consisted principally of sandwiches and hard-boiled eggs.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE Penn-Federal Corporation, operator of Loew's Penn Theater, has been showing satisfactory profits in spite of the present slump in theater patronage. The company recently reported net earnings for the first 28 weeks of operation from September 1, 1927, to March 11, 1928, of $121,000 after deducting all charges and expenses including bond interest and picture rentals.

THIS was three and one-half times the dividend requirements for the period on the $1,000,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock. The actual factor of safety for the preferred dividends is much greater.

The control of the company, through ownership of over half of the 375,000 shares of common stock, is held by Loew's, Incorporated, and the United Artist's Circuit, Inc. United Artist's pictures are exhibited on a percentage basis, but under the agreement the box office receipts must first be applied to the cost of operating the theater and to the payment of interest on bonds and the dividend on the preferred stock before any rental payment can be paid for the films.

LOEW'S, INCORPORATED, has guaranteed the interest on the $1,000,000 of first mortgage 6 per cent sinking fund bonds due 1946. When these bonds were originally sold a theater costing $1,600,000 was proposed. The plans were subsequently changed to provide for a $2,500,000 building. Thus the equity of the bonds was greatly increased. The additional financing was done through the sale of the preferred stock.

A FEATURE of the bonds which is proving of value is the provision for the purchase of the stock. Each $1,000 bond carries a warrant entitling the holder to buy 25 shares of the common stock at $4 a share before July 1, 1929. The stock has a value considerably in excess of the subscription price.

The bonds were recently quoted over the counter at 105 bid with warrants attached and 100 without the warrants. There were no asking quotations.

Based on this the warrant of a $1,000 bond would have a value of at least $50. Actually there have been sales of warrants at higher figures.

A PORTION of Penn-Federal's revenue will be received from the rental of store and office space in the building. Part of this is now under lease.

The replacement of the Federal Street Bridge has temporarily reduced the desirability of space in the building. The completion of the bridge this fall will again open Federal street as a main traffic artery to the North Side. This may be expected to help the renting of the stores. It may also tend to increase attendance at the theater.

THE steady increase in the use of the rivers by the steel industry may be seen in the tonnage figures for June published by the United States Engineer Office. Shipments of iron and steel on the Monongahela River last month totaled 75,422 tons compared with 31,894 tons in June, 1927. A similar increase was reported for the Ohio River which moved 96,156 tons against 42,220 tons a year ago.

THE fact that the large steel companies do not make public the costs of the river transportation systems makes it difficult to estimate their actual savings. It is known, however, that the difference between river and rail transportation costs is impressive. The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, which pioneered the revival of river shipments several years ago, saved money in the very first month in which it started its river service. The steel industry's investments in river fleets are probably giving it a greater return on its money than any other improvements which have been made in the past 10 years.

A GOOD volume of automobile production this year has helped the plate glass makers. June output of polished plate glass was 10,723,056 square feet compared with 10,223,683 square feet in May. The total for the second quarter of this year of 30,900,213 square feet was greater than 29,595,355 square feet in the first quarter of the year.

The six months' total of 60,495,568 square feet also was greater than in the corresponding period of 1927 when 57,831,090 square feet were produced.

Prices of plate glass are still too low for manufacturers to show the profits which should be expected with such a large output.

SETTLE SCHOOL BLAST LOSS

For damage to the Conroy and other schools by the Reedsdale street gas tank blast on the North Side last year, the Equitable Gas Company has agreed to pay the Board of Public Education its claim for $19,546.34, according to Charles Bernhard, assistant secretary of the board.

Authorization of the signing of a release on payment of the claim was announced by the board, the payment being expected within a few days.

The principal damage by the gas blast was to the Conroy School, where windows were shattered, walls broken and other damage. Windows were broken in several other schools, some of them a considerable distance from the scene of the fatal blast.

BUGS BAER Says

(Copyright, 1928.)

OF all the Olympics held in Europe we like those of 1918.

No young athlete had trouble in making that team.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

You didn't even require your college letter.

All you needed was your government post-card.

We had two million winners in the 1918 Olympics.

One of the glorious events was walking with the 14-pound shoes.

Another was the 100,000 kilometer for sprinters desiring to spread the news the enemy was coming.

Midnight marathons were popular events in No Man's picnic grounds. You qualified in short relays, stopping at filling stations dug by shells.

Rowing without oars in thunder showers demonstrated that our athletes were still amateurs.

Ring-around-a-rosy with two-pound hand grenades was easy.

Squat tag brought some fine contests between raiding parties. It all depended on who was tagged first.

Borrowing the makings was a dead heat between the English and Americans.

The Paris relay team also did great.

All our Second Looies turned out to be high jumpers when the General started breathing through his ears.

But the best event was the yacht race back to Hoboken.

SKYWARD

By RICHARD E. BYRD.

there was plenty of room for navigating. There was also a fair-sized chartboard.

As exact Greenwich time was necessary, we carried two chronometers that I had kept in my room for weeks. I knew their error to within a second. There seems to be a tendency for chronometers to slow up when exposed to the cold. With this in mind we had taken their cold-weather error.

As we sped along over the white field below I spent the busiest and most concentrated moments of my life. Though we had confidence in our instruments and methods, we were trying them for the first time over the Polar Sea. First, we obtained north and south bearings on a mountain range on Spitzbergen which we could see for a long distance out over the ice. These checked fairly well with the sun-compass. But I had absolute confidence in the sun-compass.

We could see mountains astern gleaming in the sun at least a hundred miles behind us. That was our last link with civilization. The unknown lay ahead.

Bennett and I took turns piloting. At first Bennett was steering, and for some unaccountable reason the plane veered from the course time and time again, to the right. He could glance back where I was working, through a door leading to the two pilots' seats. Every minute or two he would look at me, to be checked, if necessary, on the course by the sun-compass. If he happened to be off the course I would wave him to the right or left until he got on again. Once every three minutes while I was navigating I checked the wind drift and ground speed, so that in case of a change in wind I could detect it immediately and allow for it.

We had three sets of gloves which I constantly changed to fit the job in hand, and sometimes removed entirely for short periods to write or figure on the chart. I froze my face and one of my hands in taking sights with the instruments from the trap-doors. But I noticed these frostbites at once and was more careful thereafter in the future. Ordinarily a frostbite need not be dangerous if detected in time and if the blood is rubbed back immediately into the affected parts. We also carried leather helmets that would cover the whole face when necessary to use them.

Huge Ice Pack

We carried two sun-compasses. One was fixed to a trapdoor in the top of the navigator's cabin; the other was movable, so that when the great wing obscured the sun from the compass on the trapdoor, the second could be used inside the cabin, through the open windows.

Every now and then I took sextant sights of the sun to see where the lines of position would cross our line of flight. I was very thankful at those moments that the Navy requires such thorough navigation training, and that I had made air navigation my hobby.

Finally, when I felt certain we were on our course, I turned my attention to the great ice pack, which I had wondered about ever since I was a youngster at school. We were flying at about 2,000 feet, and I could see at least 50 miles in every direction. There was no sign of land. If there had been any within 100 miles' radius we would have seen its mountain peaks, so good was the visibility.

The ice pack beneath was criss-crossed with pressure ridges, but here and there were stretches that appeared long and smooth enough to land on. However, from 2,000 feet pack ice is extraordinarily deceptive.

The pressure ridges that looked so insignificant from the plane varied from a few feet to 50 or 60 feet in height, while the average thickness of the ice was about 40 feet. A flash of sympathy came over me for the brave men who had in years past struggled northward over that cruel mass.

We passed leads of water recently opened by the movement of the ice, and so dangerous to the foot traveler, who never knows when the ice will open up beneath and swallow him into the black depths of the Polar Sea.

Wind Conditions Good

I turned my mind to wind conditions, for I knew they were a matter of interest to all those contemplating the feasibility of a polar airway. We found them good. There were no bumps in the air. This was as we had anticipated, for the flatness of the ice and the temperature was not conducive to air currents, such as are sometimes found over land. Had we struck an Artic gale, I cannot say what the result would have been as far as air roughness is concerned. Of course we still had the advantage of spring and 24-hour daylight.

It was time now to relieve Bennett again at the wheel, not only that he might stretch his legs, but so that he could pour gasoline into the tanks from the five-gallon tins stowed all over the cabin. Empty cans were thrown overboard to get rid of the weight, small though it was.

Frequently I was able to check myself on the course by holding the sun-compass in one hand and steering with the other.

I had time now leisurely to examine the ice pack and eagerly sought signs of life, a polar bear, a seal, or birds flying, but could see none.

On one occasion, as I turned to look over the side, my arm struck some object in my left breast pocket. It was filled with good-luck pieces!

I am not superstitious, I believe. No, explorer, however, can go off without such articles. Among my trinkets was a religious medal put there by a friend. It belonged to his fiancee and he firmly believed it would get me through. There was also a tiny horseshoe made by a famous blacksmith. Attached to the pocket was a little coin taken by Peary, pinned to his shirt, on his trip to the North Pole.

My dear Big Boy
All last evening you kept calling me Mable. Why did you? because my name is really Alice
Do you know what these are?
X X X X X X X + +

"WELL, my dear, I'm simply QUIBling to TELL you about this strange WOE which has befallen ARab's sailor BROTHer on account of this poisonous SHIMmy-fluffer who's inTRIGUED him at this point, because I mean just as I TOLD you YESterday, my dear, it was a perfect CINCH to get it OUT of him, and it's POSitively the most abSURD idea you've ever conCEIVED, my dear, because it seems he got her NAME wrong and kept calling her MAble instead of ALice, but I mean I couldn't see anything so HECtic about that, my dear, until with a draMATic GEStrure he BARED his CHEST and disPLAYED this LARGE sized HEART and the word 'MAble' taTOOED on it in PASsionate CAPitals—can you BEAR it, my dear? ACtually, I NEARly had hysTERics because I think it's POSitively SCREAMing, my dear, only it's TRAgedy to HIM, my dear, because it's all very WELL to say what's in a NAME, but when you have one taTOOED on your CHEST and it turns out to be the WRONG one you can't DO very much aBOUT it except adMIT the misTAKE or wear a permanent MUStard plaster over it or something! But, my dear, I KNOW I'd be SIMply LIVid if any youth who was MADly eNAMeled of me ever had my NAME inscribed on his CHEST, my dear, because think how PUBLIC and all it would sort of BE every time the odd soul took a BATH, do you know what I mean?"

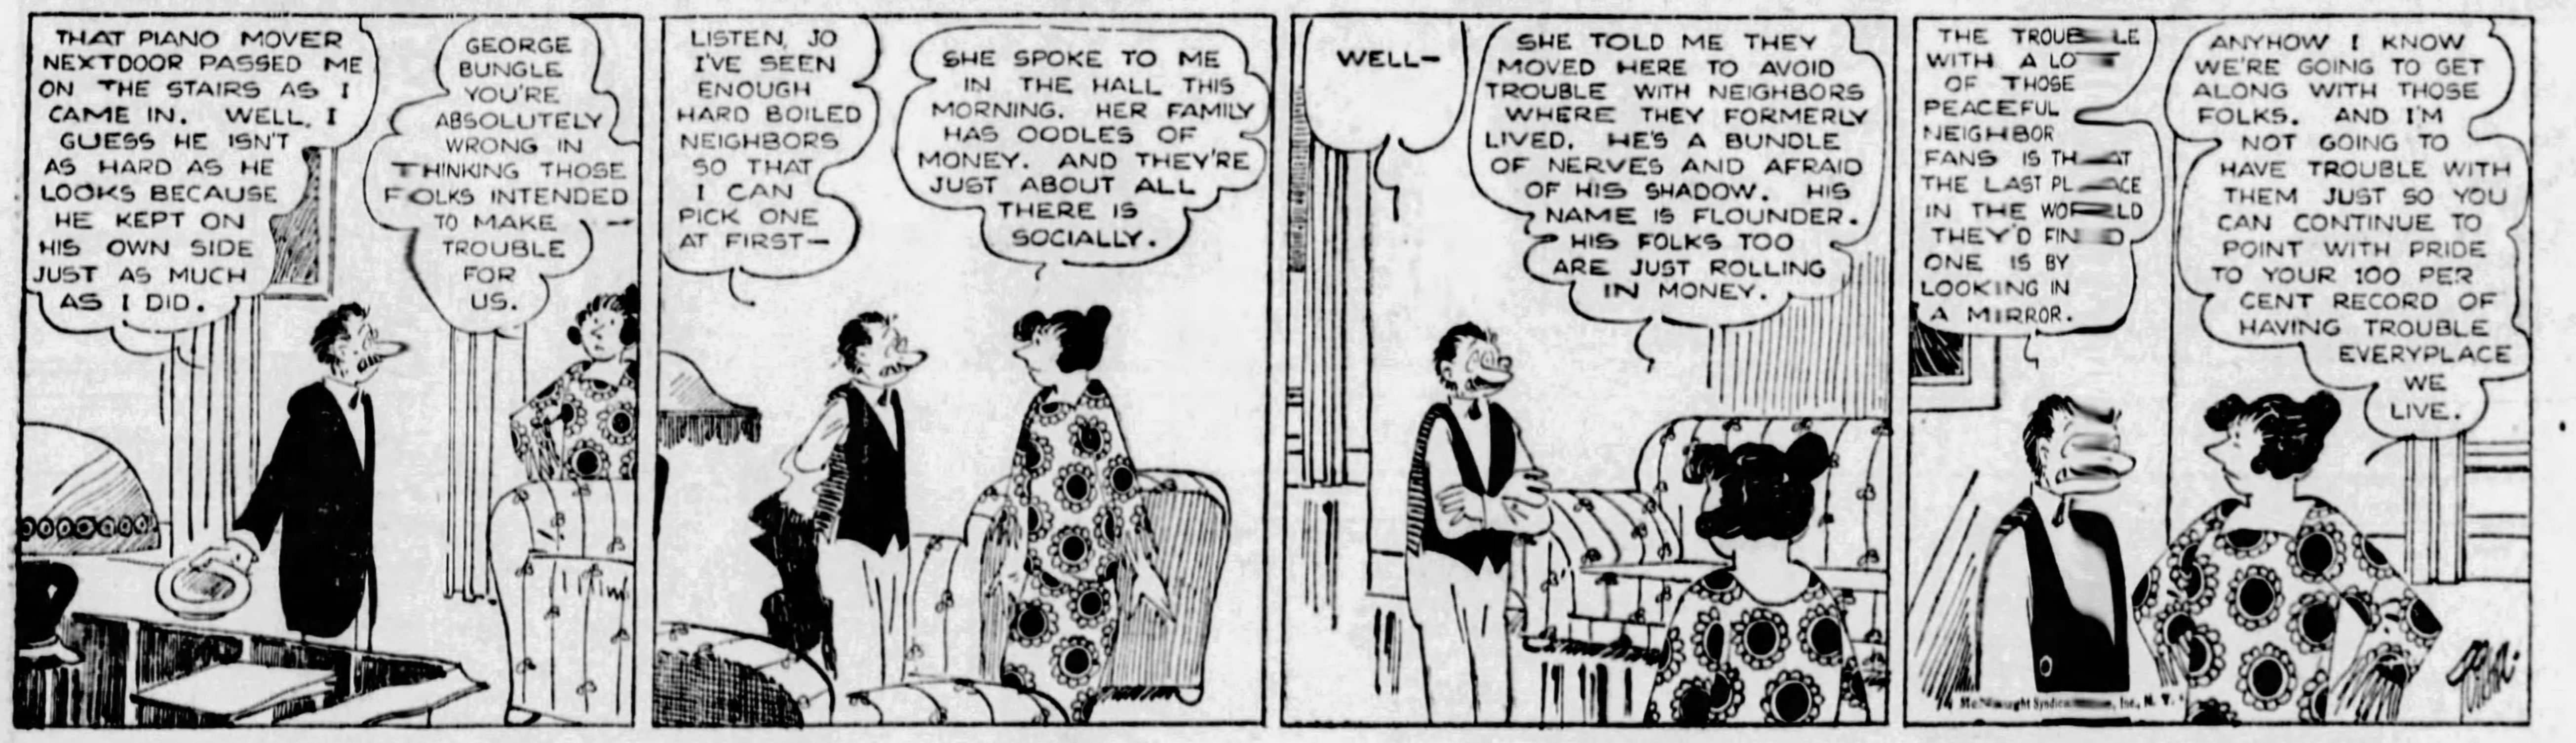
THE BUNGLE FAMILY - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - George, Be Peaceful



THAT PIANO MOVER NEXTDOOR PASSED ME ON THE STAIRS AS I CAME IN. WELL, I GUESS HE ISN'T AS HARD AS HE LOOKS BECAUSE HE KEPT ON HIS OWN SIDE JUST AS MUCH AS I DID.
GEORGE BUNGLE YOU'RE ABSOLUTELY WRONG IN THINKING THOSE FOLKS INTENDED TO MAKE TROUBLE FOR US.
LISTEN, JO I'VE SEEN ENOUGH HARD BOILED NEIGHBORS SO THAT I CAN PICK ONE AT FIRST—
SHE SPOKE TO ME IN THE HALL THIS MORNING. HER FAMILY HAS OODLES OF MONEY. AND THEY'RE JUST ABOUT ALL THERE IS SOCIALLY.
WELL—
SHE TOLD ME THEY MOVED HERE TO AVOID TROUBLE WITH NEIGHBORS WHERE THEY FORMERLY LIVED. HE'S A BUNDLE OF NERVES AND AFRAID OF HIS SHADOW. HIS NAME IS FLOUNDER. HIS FOLKS TOO ARE JUST ROLLING IN MONEY.
THE TROUBLE WITH A LOT OF THOSE PEACEFUL NEIGHBOR FANS IS THAT THE LAST PLACE IN THE WORLD THEY'D FIND ONE IS BY LOOKING IN A MIRROR.
ANYHOW I KNOW WE'RE GOING TO GET ALONG WITH THOSE FOLKS. AND I'M NOT GOING TO HAVE TROUBLE WITH THEM JUST SO YOU CAN CONTINUE TO POINT WITH PRIDE TO YOUR 100 PER CENT RECORD OF HAVING TROUBLE EVERYPLACE WE LIVE.

'Twas always a game when he came for his adjustment, for he must pretend with impish glee he wouldn't take it till I'd pretend how angry I was. Then he'd climb up on the "jestment" table and turn his head the wrong way, as he very well knew. And then to make up for his naughty ways he'd tell me how much he loved "his doctor" . . . And I know I'll keep the love he gave with that sunny smile as he said, "My doctor," for Jimmy now walks, and he owes it all to Chiropractic. I thank you.

Sir Harry Doncaster.

SYNOPSIS.—Sir Harry Doncaster, after feeling in his breast pocket, remembers that the lady's glove is gone! He still retains the clipping from the Southdown Reporter and Devil's Dyke Free Press urging gent who picked up lady's glove at Dragoons' Ball to be at Zoological Gardens at half after two on Sunday next.

THE glove was gone!

Nevertheless, Sir Harry Doncaster avowed himself to Zoological Gardens at half after two. Thence he strolled, appearing only to be bent upon a visit to the cage of his favorite animal. This object accomplished, he concentrated his attention in quest of an unoccupied seat—a pleasing pursuit which passed away an hour very well.

"Sitting," thought Sir Harry to himself, "is comparatively dull." Just then his attention—

City's Experience Proves Annexation Is Costly

Elwyn, as that part of Baldwin township in the vicinity of Overbrook is known, is to seek annexation to Pittsburgh by election, a petition of voters having been presented in court. It is expected Overbrook and Elwyn will vote on annexation at the same time.

There will be objectors, of course, in the districts mentioned, but if the pro-annexationists win it is probable that no action on the part of the city will prevent them becoming part of us. It is not evident that there should be. Heretofore we have welcomed all such movements. We have felt that we needed the additional territory as much as they needed us. Recent developments, however, indicate that the city may have to be a little cautious hereafter.

Just now it is difficult to determine if the city acquired an asset or a liability in taking in territory of which Beck's Run and Seldom Seen are parts. The city is confronted with the immediate expenditure of $45,000 and an ultimate estimated expense of $15,000 additional to reconstruct Beck's Run road. It also is noted that Seldom Seen has been given a water line, laid hurriedly as an emergency in a threatened epidemic of typhoid fever.

Now we know there is no telling what the future will bring in these matters and we are optimistic enough to believe that, like the acquisition of Alaska by the Federal government, both of these districts will prove of great worth to the city in time, but the developments prove that the city is required to look to its own interest a little, too, in the matter of annexation. In assuming this position we are not casting reflections on Overbrook, Elwyn or any other locality, but merely pointing out that a general, free-handed, open-armed welcoming policy is not the wisest plan in the world.

We want all of the boroughs around Pittsburgh to become part of us, but we would prefer the sweet with the bitter and not the bitter alone. We seldom get the sweet alone.

Yes, You Can Do It

The Rider Says It to the Horse.

MARVELOUS SPANISH RIDER.

Here you see Captain the Marquis de los Trujillos, a Spanish army officer, performing a feat in riding that amazed the gallant French Captain de Montergon, who witnessed the feat, performed not only by los Trujillos, whom you see here, but by others.

Describing the desperate riding achievements of these Spaniards, reckless of their lives and determined to eclipse all other army riding, the French captain says:

> "When I saw the top of the last descent and understood what they were proposing to do, when, seized by giddiness, I bent over a steep and abrupt drop of 20 meters (about 65 feet), full of hollows and clayey soil, at the end of which only a sandy slope offered itself to receive them, I thought: 'That is not possible! They will never go down!' But they did go down. Men and horses. They let themselves drop like stones in empty space, leaping from step to step. Only three effected the terrible leap without a fall, but all got down. Honor to these intrepid riders, to their horses, as brave as themselves; honor above all, to their leader, who went down first! That leader was my friend, Captain the Marquis de los Trujillos, who twice performed this feat. A splendid race is that which produces these men."

Well may the Frenchman say of the Spaniards, "A splendid race is that which produces these men."

The Spanish are a great people. They have been in eclipse, compared with other nations, for some centruies, but the power that is theirs will blaze out afresh.

Encouragement of schools which honor the present government will help.

Meanwhile, readers, here is the moral for us all in this picture.

Fathers and mothers that read it ought to call to it the attention of boys and girls beginning life.

LEFT TO HIMSELF, THE HORSE WOULD NEVER DO THIS THING.

He would look over the edge of such a precipice, as thousands of wild horses have done, and retreat frightened.

But the rider—who is to the horse what our brains and will power are to us—the rider knows that it CAN BE DONE.

He uses his will, overcomes the hesitancy and fear of the horse, and the extraordinary feat is accomplished.

The daring Spaniard conquered his own fears and thus conquered the fears of the horse. That which ordinarily would have been impossible WAS DONE.

Few of us want to ride down such steep hills. A majority are more interested in "stepping on the gas" than riding high-spirited horses.

But we DO want to accomplish that which is difficult and useful, that which will enable us to achieve credit for ourselves, and honor our fathers and mothers according to the commandment.

The first step is to develop the strong will that says "IT CAN BE DONE," and at the same time to develop the cool judgment that concentrates on difficulties, and not RECKLESSLY distinguishes between CAN and that which CANNOT be accomplished.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 21.—Manhattan's overwhelming bigness denies the pleasant reactions so vivid to those born and reared in small towns. The New Yorker does not miss them because he has never known their existence. Monotony of villages evokes a power for small details.

In New York they are stifled. Being a dweller in a congested center of the metropolis, I cannot offhand say what sort of building occupies the northwest corner of a given location six blocks away, although likely it is a 30 or 40-story skyscraper.

Yet in my home town I know the exact location of a tin baking powder sign tacked with many others on the east side of McCormick's livery stable. In New York, too, an acuteness for sounds, locations, odors and sundry trivia is entirely lost.

In the metropolis we are conscious only of an incessant and incoherent rumble, but sounds are so differentiated by small town ears that in the drowze of a summer evening I could distinguish the steps of a Col. John L. Vance as he turned the Court street corner on his way home.

Acres of motor cars screech and honk their din here and it is all a jumble. It is necessary for a carriage starter to inform one the automobile is at the door. But any small towner can tell you the exact location of the village hack by sense of sound. In a city that gift vanishes.

Only this morning I became conscious that from my window there is the view of an enormous half-block long building and it is one-half finished although I never noticed it before despite the riveting and hammering that must have been going on day and night.

Of course New York has its compensation in the constant wonders a village never beholds. Yet to miss the strong odor of pine, the baying of a hound, stone plaited gutters gushing with fresh rain, the morning song of birds, the sound of familiar footsteps and the squeak of a neighboring cistern is missing much.

One of America's successful novelists has for 15 years made it a fixed custom to write no more and no less than 50 lines on his typewriter every day, Sunday included. Sometimes he is able to accomplish his work in an hour and other times he is touched by a mental sterility that keeps him at his desk far into the night. On one particular trying occasion he began at 1 o'clock in the morning and finished at daybreak the following morning. Roughly speaking, 50 lines is slightly in excess of 500 words. It seems easy—except to nit-wits who are forced to do it day after day.

Magazine editors long ago learned it was deadly suddenly to inform a writer his stuff must be ready, say within 24 hours or such. The instand he does that, thoughts fly out the window. Instead, the editor uses cajolery and gives the impression it doesn't at all matter, but if it could be done it would be a great personal favor. In that way he seldom has trouble.

* * *

A New York idea of grandeur: "To live in town and have a yard."

* * *

Another impressive thing about New York is its sociability in the morning compared to that in the evening. An early riser sees passers-by in a semi-smiling attitude. Truckmen banter jovially. The crossing cop waves his hand and a noticeable amiability pervades the town. But toward evening this begins to vanish. There is a collective snarl and elbow punching and shin kicking become outdoor pastimes. Taxi drivers hurl surly epithets and altercations are frequent in midtown in the late afternoon but rarely in the morning. It is obvious nerves have been rubbed raw by the daily grind.

One of those young men with a panama hat pulled down all way round who rides about in biscuit colored roadster passed a stop signal on Fifth avenue this morning.

"I am late to a tennis match," he explained to the cop.

We walked away with our fingers in our ears.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The "Wind" of a Meteor

THE shaking, mistaken for an earthquake, that was caused by the great meteor which shot over the states of Georgia and Alabama last month, is a vivid reminder of the immense energy possessed by those swift wanderers of space, whose motion, imparted like that of the earth by the gravitation of the sun, exceeds the earth's velocity more than 7 per cent. These bodies enter the atmosphere from various directions, and when the direction chances to be opposite to that of the earth's orbital motion their speed, in the air, may rise to about 45 miles per second. On the average it is about 25 miles.

This, as Prof. Charles P. Olivier, recently appointed director of the Flower Observatory of Pennsylvania University, remarks, is 50 times the speed of a shell from a cannon, and must cause air waves so powerful that they may shake buildings, break window glass, crack plaster walls, and produce the impression that the earth itself is vibrating as in a real earthquake. This is what happened when the recent meteor passed over the Southern States. People indoors, not seeing the meteor, naturally supposed that it was the ground that had been shaken.

Great meteors of this kind often explode with a violence exceeding that of the explosion of the heaviest shells, and these shattering explosions must also send out air waves of corresponding power. Year before last a whole volley of such "celestial projectiles" passed over Central Siberia, and, if the reports since received are trustworthy, wide regions of forest were practically leveled by them. This, if true, is without historic precedent, though in remoter times meteoric falls of even greater destructiveness seem to have occurred. The most famous of these is the immense Arizona meteor which, there is reason to believe, produced the "crater" at Canyon Diablo.

It has been calculated, judging from the depth and breadth of this huge crater-like hole, together with the nature of the materials contained in it and the manner in which the strata of rock were shattered and broken through at the point of impact, that the mass that fell must have been enormous, and moving with a velocity that rendered it capable of shaking a wide region of the solid earth itself. If this had occurred within the period of human occupation it appears certain that traditions of so tremendous an event would have been handed down among the Indian tribes, but nothing of the kind has been found, so that either the fall occurred in a prehistoric age or there were no inhabitants of that part of the country when the great meteor plunged out of space.

Whenever a bright meteor appears the question is revived. What are these strange bodies and whence do they come? About all that science can yet say is that they consist most often of stony materials, but sometimes of iron alloy with a little nickel and traces of a few other metals. This composition, in view of the great density of the substances, is very puzzling and has no doubt a bearing on the question of origin. It would seem as if such bodies must once have formed part of incomparably greater masses, such as planets. The view has also been held that they may have been shot out of the sun, or even more distant stars. However, the probability is strong that their place of origin was not outside the solar system. They offer one of the most fascinating of the unsolved problems of astronomy.

Isn't It So?

A man is stubborn in just about the same proportion as he is ignorant.

Once Overs

Get at the Essence of Things

DON'T be an imitator.

Don't make a living by stealing the ideas of others to adopt them to your own use.

Originality brings the greater reward.

The world is full of good copyists, but the originator gets the real money.

You'll have to think and think hard to do the new and untried.

So many thing have been presented that you may think there is nothing left for you to put over.

But there is.

The limits of brain power can never be exhausted.

But you have to train your mind to think along different channels.

Not the easiest way, but the new and the different—keep this in mind.

Be interested in many things.

Get at the fundamentals of many things.

Think about what you see—use your imagination.

To use your brain is to increase its usefulness.

To lose the power to evolve new things comes from coasting along on other persons' ideas.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Never Enough

SOME men have had too much of gold,
The shining stuff at last
Has made them restless, left them cold
With all its glamor past.

Some men have had too much of fame,
They tired of those delights
Which brought them with deathless name
The loneliness of heights.

But who has ever wearied yet
Of tenderness and trust?
And who is there who would forget
Love's bloom that crowns life's dust?

No Passports

THE government of Mexico has adopted a sensible practice with respect to tourists.

Instead of exacting passports and costly red tape at border points, it has arranged with railroads and steamship lines for the latter to issue to their tourist passengers simple cards of identification, which will be honored by the Mexican immigration officials.

The carriers will be held responsible if there are abuses.

In this migratory age the petty obstructions which so many governments continue to maintin to the flow of tourist travel are quite out of proportion to their political, social or economic value.

With the radio and airplane forging new links among the peoples it is reactionary for officialdom to prolong the espionage process of generations ago.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

OF COURSE husbands and wives don't fight as much in real life as they do in the jokes or on the stage, but it always helps to make a joke if you can have the husband and wife kinda sore at one another.

So they were sore, and she says, "Well, anyhow, I always try to learn by my mistakes."

"Gee," he says, "if that's the case you ought to be a lot smarter than Bernard Shaw and Einstein together by this time! You ain't a kindergarten pupil you know, but you gone through the whole University! And still—"

Something interrupted, and I never did hear what the rest of it was that he was going to say.

Well Worth Knowing

PERCIVAL was penniless, but had found the most beautiful girl in the world, and, naturally, he proposed to her.

"Darling," he said. "I worship you. Will you marry me? I'm not wealthy like Adolphe Menjou; I haven't got a car; no town house or country cottage to lay at your feet, but, oh, girl, I do love you with all my heart, and I cannot, nay, will not, live without you."

The girl threw her two white arms round the young man's neck and pressed her lips to his fiercely.

"I love you, too, Percival," she said. "And I'll marry you gladly. But, tell me, where does this fellow Adolphe live?"

No Wonder

THE captain and his chief engineer, tired of endless arguments as to which the ship could dispense with, decided to change places to settle the matter once and for all.

The chief ascended the bridge and the captain went below deck.

After a couple of hours the captain reappeared on the deck covered from head to feet with oil.

"Chief," he bellowed, "you'll have to come down here at once! I can't shift the blinkin' hooker an inch!"

"No," replied the engineer shortly, "I don't suppose you can. We've been ashore for half an hour!"

Paid in Full

"MY DEAR," cried the old man as he entered the cheerful dining-room, "I have a little surprise for you. Today is our diamond wedding?"

"Indeed," remarked his wife, "that is very kind of you." And the silver-haired old lady beamed warmly on her husband.

He took her left hand in his.

"You see this engagement ring I gave you 64 years ago?"

"Yes."

"Well, my dear," concluded the old man, "I paid the final installment today, and it is now entirely yours to do what you like with."

Spiteful Brutes

TOTTERING perceptibly, he arrived home just as the clocks were striking three.

After carefully removing his shoes, he tip-toed softly to his door. He managed to open it noiselessly, and was half-way down the hall when he stumbled against a bowl of goldfish.

His wife, hearing the crash, appeared at the head of the stairs and called sharply:

"George! What are you doing?"

"I'll teach these blooming goldfish to snap," he muttered grimly.

Science and Health

EVERY new mechanical achievement of man brings with it new perils to human health or a new demand on evolution.

Thus the automobile, in addition to developing in pedestrians a sixth sense, to apprise them when signals of approach fail, has given us carbon monoxide, with what physiological results we yet do not know.

And now the airplane is to be studied for the effects of continued altitude on body functioning.

Nature is marvelously adaptive. We somehow manage to survive our own Frankensteins.

Work

By DR. FRANK CRANE

According to accepted traditions, work was a curse pronounced upon man by the deity when man was expelled from the Garden of Eden.

If this be true, then it is true that the curse of God is better than the blessing of man.

For there can hardly be any doubt that working for one's bread and butter and shelter is about the best thing that ever happened to a man.

Suppose all the teeming millions in New York were idle, that they had nothing to do but amuse themselves, it would not be a week before the city was burned down. It is the fact that most of us have to put in a certain number of hours in earning our livelihood that keeps us sane.

The sanest thing on earth is work. Men who devote their time to imagining, to theology, to philosophy, or to other speculations are fertile soil to all kinds of disorder. It is men who have to work that are the flywheel of every nation. As a rule they want things to remain as they are.

And as a rule they are the bulwark of morality. Crime news and divorce court scandals originate largely in the idle classes. Chesterton has said that when a man puts in ten hours a day at street car driving he is not likely to be tangled up with the wife of someone else. He hasn't time even for his own wife.

The workers are the security of a country and the best guarantee of that country's prosperity.

The greatest menace of militarism is that a large body of men are kept in comparative idleness. If the millions under arms in Europe could be disbanded and go to work it would be the best insurance of peace.

Workers as a rule are not interested in fighting.

Of course there is excess in everything. There are men who continue at work as a sort of obsession, and who take no vacation. Ordinarily they break down.

All work should be tempered with play, but play is the condiment of life. When there is too much salt and pepper the meat is spoiled. The main part of a man's days should be spent in useful employment, and by useful I mean the kind of work the world is willing to pay for. The advantage of pay being not that it enables a man after a while to quit work, but that it shows that his work is of value to the world.

How many a divorce trouble would be avoided if both man and woman were economically independent.

It was not a bad idea of the Jews of old to instruct their children in some useful trade. The best life insurance policy that a man can leave his family is to have them all so trained that they can make their own way in the world.

It is doubted that the man with the hoe, the laborer, should be the object of so much sentimental pity. For, after all, the man who knows how to use his hoe has a greater prospect of happiness in this world than the man that is left an endowment of a million dollars.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

THERE is no better way to find out what prominent women are really like, than to be a society editor or woman reporter. What a sense of personal values a job like that gives these young women!

Margot Asquith once asked: "Isn't that a terrible job? Aren't people rude sometimes and disagreeable?"

"Yes," said the reporter, "but it's a fine chance to study people. The right kind never insult you, and the wrong kind can't."

And Lady Asquith finally agreed that was right.

Which brings up the subject of a certain society wedding held at the summer home of some extremely wealthy and exclusive New Yorkers a year ago.

The mother of the bride refused to let any of the reporters into the house for the wedding. They couldn't even come inside the great gate at the entrance to the estate to see the decorations.

They camped faithfully outside the gates and waited, for the lady told them she would see them all after the wedding and give them the details.

From the perch which they found nearby, the reporters watched the goings on in the garden where the wedding celebration was in progress. They saw corks fly into the air and they heard grand music, and they saw young ladies being helped into big cars, a little too wobbly to help themselves.

It would have made good reading, but of course theirs was a bird's eye view.

They thought they understood why they were not admitted.

When the guests had left the reporters waited. There were twelve newspapers and news services represented. They would be late with their copy and they were nervous. So they sent a very polite little note to the lady, reminding her that she had promised to give them the details on the wedding, and asking if she would see them now.

They sent the note by a guard at the portals.

It was about three minutes before the officer returned. He was smiling, amused. He carried in his hand the note, torn in six pieces, and followed orders, to return them to the newspaper reporters. That was all.

And I'll wager you never saw anything like that in a book of etiquette.

I can think of a hundred who's-who who wouldn't do a thing like that. And it only goes to prove that in spite of money and pride of place, the society reporter was right. "The right kind won't insult you, and the wrong kind CAN'T."
